PREFACE.

The family whose history is contained in this volume has been settled in America since 1637 and probably for several years longer. A member of it born to-day might represent the tenth or possibly the eleventh generation. Thomas Halsey, the immigrant ancestor, was an Englishman, the main facts of whose life are authentically known. His line has been traced in England back to 1512 and apparently to 1458. Indeed English bearers of the name have been found as early as 1189; but we have as yet no proof connecting any of these with the line of Thomas. Thomas was of Hertfordshire and they were of Cornwall.

Mr. Jacob L. Halsey of East Orange, N. J., became interested in the present work early in 1883 and pursued it systematically for ten years, finding in it a diversion from his business cares. His base of operations was the directories of towns and cities throughout the United States, from which he obtained lists of names that enabled him to enter upon a laborious and far extended correspondence. He and those assisting him traced about 2,300 descendants of Thomas out of a possible 5,500, exclusive of the female lines. It was pioneer work that Mr. Halsey did and it was attanded by such toil as pioneers usually undergo. But Mr. Halsey advanced far beyond the pioneer stage, since he transformed a desert into something like a fair and fertile field.

In the autumn of 1893, finding his business engagements would interfere with his plans for early publication, Mr. Halsey prevailed upon Mr. Edmund D. Halsey of Rockaway, N.

J., who had already been interested in the work for many years and had collected a large mass of material, to undertake the final revision of the entire work and to see it safely through the press. To Edmund D. Halsey this involved considerable unexpected labor, due to the finding of new material, to the need for further light on certain obscure points, and to difficulties in completing sketches of individuals who had prominence. Setting about the work at once, he gave to it the most of his leisure time, not only throughout the ensuing winter, but during the spring, summer, autumn and winter of the next year. Indeed the autumn of 1895 had arrived ere the last proofs were read by him. Mr. Jacob L. Halsey had parted with his material in the faith that he had practically finished the book in so far as it was possible to do so, but the experience of his successor again demonstrated the familiar genealogical truism that a family history never is and never can be wholly finished.

In the meantime it had seemed desirable that an introduction should be written to show what was the ancestral line back of Thomas, with such other facts about the English family as were related to the theme of the book, with an outline of the times in which Thomas spent the formative years of his youth and early manhood, with a narrative of all the known facts concerning Thomas's life in America and finally an exposition of the American environment in which Thomas lived out that part of his long life which here remained to him. Of these several phases of the life of Thomas an important fact not cited in the introduction, is the existence of autographs of him of three different dates, as shown in the accompanying fac similes, beginning with a letter he wrote from Naples in 1621 (printed on page 27) and closing with the signature to his will now preserved in the Surrogate's office in New York City. The handwriting in each shows the same characteristics and has interest in connection with the identity of the man. The writing of the introduction was entrusted to Francis W. Halsey of New York, who has also prepared the index.

During the ten years given to the work by Jacob L. Halsey constant assistance was rendered him by his brother, the late Jonathan O. Halsey of East Orange, N. J. To Prof. John J. Halsey of Lake Forest, Ill., he became indebted for much laborious research in several directions, especially in regard to the North Carolina family. From Miss Cornelia U. Halsey of Newark, useful and willing aid was often secured and especially with regard to that important branch of the family which is so closely linked with the fortunes of Newark. Edmund T. Halsey of Louisville, Ky., also rendered material aid.

It is hardly practicable to name all the printed authorities consulted by the compilers, but it should be mentioned that they have been indebted to Howell's "History of Southampton" for indispensible information regarding the earlier generations, and to Littell's "Early Settlers of the Passaic Valley." The results of much individual research on the part of members of the family at the same time have been kindly placed at their disposal. The work, however, is still incomplete, by reason of the impossibilty of connecting several families with the main stem to which they undoubtedly belong. This is particularly the case with those residing in the Southern States.

The reticence or indifference of persons of the name who have not replied to repeated requests for information has much increased the labor and expense involved in the preparation of the work. It should be said that every person of the name whose residence could be obtained from local directories, or otherwise, was addressed through a circular letter, explaining the purpose of the inquiry and requesting information as to names, places and dates of birth, occupation, place and date of death, &c. Care was taken to inspire confidence in the enquiry by indicating the business standing and character of the enquirers. It is probable that those who have not replied will furnish the larger number of critics of the work, but the compilers still request information from them in the way of additions and corrections, so that additional leaves may be printed and sent to those who purchase the work should the accumulation of matter be such as to warrant doing so.

The system of numbering employed is that devised by the Rev. John E. Todd, which he has kindly permitted to be used. The number of figures indicates the number of the generation, counting Thomas the pilgrim as the first, and the figures themselves indicate the parentage of the individual, e. g., 11817 Isaac is of the 5th generation, and is the 7th child of 1181 Jeremiah of the 4th who is the oldest child of 118 Jeremiah of the 3rd, and so on. When there are over nine children in a family the tenth and those younger have their numbers between two periods which indicate that the two figures are to be taken together, e. g., 11.12. Nathaniel is the 12th child of 11 Thomas.

By those of Thomas Halsey's descendants who still survive, this book may be expected to be read, possessing to their minds some permanent charm and worth. Whatever virtue may have been shown by the family during their more than two and a half centuries in America obviously needs in this place neither citation nor eulogium. But it may be assumed that within the hearts of those who read these pages will arise some of that private satisfaction which, to any reasonable and thinking son of man, should always proceed from that greatest of the gifts of fortune—being born of parents who to the world at large were as wise and honorable as to them they were tender and munificent.

THE GOLDEN PARSONAGE.

INTRODUCTION.

I. OF GENEALOGY AND GENEALOGIES.

The increasing interest in the study of genealogy, shown during late years in this country, must have impressed all who frequent public libraries, or are familiar with the work done in historical societies. The mass of genealogical literature that has grown up not only fills alcoves but might be made in itself to constitute a large library. And yet it was not so very long ago that Americans who pursued the study were liable to be made the subjects of half humorous badinage, not to say serious scoffing, that proceeded from an apparent assumption that pride of ancestry involved something of the aristocratic spirit and hence that it was un-American.

Pride of ancestry, however, for more than one reason, should be a matter for commendation, not censure, since the feelings that inspire it may be no less honorable to the individual than beneficial to society. It is true that simple vanity often lies at the root of the feeling and leads to an inopportune parading of past family distinction that is in painful contrast to present want of it ; but this is perhaps not more true than it is sad. The fact weighs not heavily, and ought scarcely to weigh at all, against that worthier and nobler pride which cherishes family worth or eminence in about the same proportion that it does not talk about it in general society. To a sound and intelligent man, there should exist few sources of inspiration more potent than a knowledge that his forebears were men and women of wisdom, honor and virtue.

This pleasure must be heightened according as one's light becomes clear and his range of vision backward is extended.

We may be certain that those who know their line for five hundred years, in one sense, are not better conditioned than those who know it for a single generation; for it is beyond dispute than one man's ancestors are as numerous as another's, so that it can be truthfully said that the head of the proudest and longest dynasty in history belonged not to an older family than the meanest human creature who begged at his door. The difference lay solely in the facts to which the study of genealogy is devoted, the Prince being a man who knew his line step by step back into the remote past, and the mendicant one who probably knew it not at all.

But apart from considerations of honorable and beneficent pride the study has a charm which springs from the light shed on one's origin. Among the mysteries of life, that concerning what we are and what we yet may be, is not greater than the one concerning what we came from. No man ever yet reached far into a solution of this problem, but there is always interest of a real sort in any light that may be shed on the obscure theme. To know from whom we came for six, eight, ten or more generations, certainly is better than to know this for only one. We soon learn from such a study much more than dates and names respecting sons who succeeded fathers. It is commonly seen that one's ancestors were endowed with traits that are easily recognized in their descendants, a survival that affords most striking proof of the tenacity of nature.

A mathematical calculation will show us that a man in the ninth generation should have in his veins so small a part of the original blood that the fraction $\frac{1}{2}\frac{1}{5}\frac{1}{6}$ is required to express it, and yet the characteristics of the original commonly survive for as many generations as nine with such vigor that we applaud the remark of Emerson that "every man is a quotation from his ancestors." Figures here do indeed seem wonderfully capable of mendacity. Indeed so much that we possess belonged originally to our forefathers that we seem hardly more than survivals, or extensions, of them, varied by environment. The unshakable destiny due to inheritance holds us firmly within its grasp. Our forebears are indeed:

"Dead but scept'red sovrans
"Who still rule our spirits from their urns."

II. THE HALSEYS OF ENGLAND.

The earliest Englishman, who bore the name of Halsey, so far as the available records show, lived in the extreme western end of Cornwall between Penzance and Land's End, a portion of England so old to civilized man that the ancient Phoenician navigators are believed to have visited it in order to obtain tin. That part of Cornwall is one of the warmest regions in all England because of its nearness to the Gulf Stream. The vegetation obtains an almost southern luxuriance. Even in mid-winter geraniums and hydrangeas thrive in profusion out of doors.

The home of these Cornish Halseys was the manor of Lanesley which lies in Gulval, a district bordering on Mount's Bay, near which rises the famous and picturesque promontory called St. Michael's Mount. We are told that in the time of Richard I, who was crowned in 1189, and of King John his successor, this estate comprised "the lands of the family surnamed de Als, now Hals, so called from the Barton, and dismantled manor of Als, now Alse and Alesa, in Buryan, as tradition saith, or Bar Alseton, Alston, in Devon in possession of Trevanin, and others, whereof they were Lords, and in particular William de Als in the beginning of the reign of King Henry III, that married Mary the daughter of Francis De-Bray, was possessed thereof, father of Simon de Als who lived in Halsham in Yorkshire from him denominated."*

The Norman preposition seems to point to some Norman origin. The word itself is more likely a purely Saxon one, dating from the invasions of the Fifth Century, or Danish, and thus was brought over by the Vikings four centuries afterward. But as a surname the word can hardly be older than the conquest when surnames seem first to have come into use in England.

* Gilbert's History of Cornwall, based on the manuscript work of William Hals, who was born at Tresawen in Wales in 1655.

In Holland the name still existed many centuries later, and Franz Hals, the painter, gave it renown. As a common noun and verb the word was used in very early times by the English, and signifies in one case the neck and in the other to embrace, or fall upon the neck of another. It occurs also in the Icelandic, Gothic, Dutch, Old Frisian, and Danish tongues, while the form hawse is Scotch. Again we find the word halse as an obsolete form of hawse, meaning that part of a ship's bow through which cables pass out.* We have here an obvious opportunity to set up a theory that "the Barton and dismantled manor" of Als in Buryan was a neck of land or that it derived its name from resemblance to the bow of a ship. But it is easy to speculate where so much is uncertain.

The historian of Cornwall asserts that Simon de Als in 1266 gave the manor of Lanesley to the prior of St. Germain's, but in the time of Henry VIII it went again into private hands, and in 1620 its owner mortgaged it to Sir Nicholas Halse of Fentongollan, a lineal descendant of Simon de Als. In the time of Edward II Lanesley embraced 16,000 or 17,000 acres. Fentongollan lay also in Cornwall, but further east, and was originally the manor of a family of the same name. The mansion was older than the Conquest, and under the mortgage came into possession of Sir Nicholas Halse. Sir Nicholas was originally from Efford near Plymouth, in the adjoining county of Devon. In the time of Elizabeth he had acquired property in Cornwall and after he had been Captain of Pendennis Castle James I honored him with knighthood.†

James Halse, a son of his, fought at La Rochelle in 1628, and afterward went to the West Indies where he was Governor of Montserrat. In the Civil War he served under a Parliamentary leader. The second son of James was William, the historian. Another William was a son of Sir Nicholas, became a Captain in the Navy, and like his brother James took part in the siege of La Rochelle. The historian

William was familiar with Fentongollan. His mother spent her old age there. He describes it as including a Church and Chantry with many large and commodious houses. It was afterward sold to a member of the Boscawen family, "who pulled down this noble old mansion, the lofty towers and fine chapel, and carried the stones to build his new house at Tregothnan, so that not a footstep is to be seen of this once magnificent place." Viscount Falmouth is now the owner of Tregothnan.

From Cornwall members of the family emigrated back to Devon. In the time of Edward II Richard Hals was living at Kenedon which lies near Kingsbridge, close to the Channel coast. In 1395 the estate of Kenedon by deed from John Govis "came to the gentile family of Halse antiently written de Alse for so a certain writer tells us that he saw it in a deed of King Edward III's age, de Alse."* The purchaser was John Hals, a descendant of Simon de Als, and one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas. He made it the seat of his family "who flourished there many generations in worshipful degree, down to the latter end of the reign of Charles II." Judge Hals in 1423, the year in which Henry V died, yielding to the expansive spirit of the age, built a considerable mansion on the Kenedon estate. He was the father of Bishop Halse of Lichfield and Coventry, who added the e to the name. The Bishop filled his office for thirty-one years, and died in 1490, at the age of ninety years, being buried in the cathedral of Lichfield. He had taken part in the Wars of the Roses as the friend of Margaret of Anjou, whom he escorted from the field of Bloreheath after the defeat of her army. In the reign of Charles II Kenedon passed out of the direct male line of descent through the will of Matthew Halse who, although male heirs were living, gave it to his sisters, one of whom had married into the Trelawney family of Cornwall. From these Kenedon Halses was descended Sir Nicholas of Fentongollan.

in Hertfordshire in 1458 we cannot assume.* We know nothing more than that those were times of great unrest and ambition throughout England. It was the period of the Wars of the Roses. The men of Cornwall and Devon, like the Bishop of Coventry, in that long conflict were among the followers of Margaret of Anjou. At the very best we can only conjecture that some of the Halseys from these distant counties when the wars had disrupted the Kingdom, took up a new home in Hertfordshire. What we know for a certainty is what is recorded by Cussans,† that the family "has been settled at Great Gaddesden for many generations." He says the earliest mention of them "is contained in a deed bearing date 10th July, 1458, (now in possession of Thomas Frederick Halsey, Esq., M. P., of Gaddesden Place,) when Richard Halsey was a party on behalf of the Parishioners to an agreement whereby the prior of King's Langley covenanted to pay the poor of Great Gaddesden the sum of ten shillings annually." In 1559, the year in which the Parish records begin, four families of the name were living at Great Gaddesden, Halsey of the Parsonage, Halsey of the Wood, Halsey of Northend, and Halsey of the Lane. Cussans adds that "on 20th March, 1520, Thomas Cooper, prior of King's Langley, leased to John Halsey and William Halsey, his son, the rectory of Great Gaddesden, for a term of twenty years, and by another indenture dated December 24, 1529, Elizabeth, prioress of the Monastery of Our Lady and St. Margaret of Dartford, and Richard, prior of the Friar's preachers of King's Langley jointly leased the same to William Halsey for thirty-one years, John, his father, to have the benefit of the ten years unexpired of the former lease."

It was in the reign of Henry VIII that the more solid family foundations were laid. On the dissolution of the religious houses, the rectory coming to the Crown, the King on March 12th, 1545, granted the Rectory to William Halsey, alias Chamber. Since that time the estate has continued in the family, and is now vested in Thomas Frederick Halsey, Esq., M. P.

* In more recent times the place has been called the Golden Parsonage, but Cussans the latest historian of Hertfordshire, says he has been unable to learn the origin of this auriferous title. Mr. Thomas Frederick Halsey in a letter of March, 1894, says: "I cannot find any trace of the house being called the Golden Parsonage until after the present residence, called Gaddesden Place, was built by my great grandfather, Thomas Halsey, somewhere about 1773."

The earliest year in which John Halsey is known to have been living at the Parsonage, 1512, belongs to an interesting period in English history. Six years before that date Henry VIII, whose father had originally intended him for the Church, but for whom destiny had labors of a quite different sort, had ascended the English throne. In that year Thomas Wolsey, already high in Henry's favor, arose by three successive steps to be Archbishop of York, Cardinal and Chancellor of England. The great age of the revival of learning had not yet passed away. More and Erasmus were still among the lights of the world, and mutterings had been heard of that convulsive storm which under Luther was to shake the foundations of Europe for more than one generation. Luther had already made himself heard, and in 1517 was to nail his famous document on the Wittenburg Church door, and three years later was publicly to burn the Papal bull.

The grant from Henry VIII to William Halsey was one of hundreds of similar grants made by that monarch after his suppression of the Monasteries. In all these religious houses numbered about one thousand. Some four hundred of them, including all that had incomes of under two hundred pounds, were seized in 1535, and in 1539, 645 others. The bulk of the land, embracing about one-fifth of all the lands of England, was granted away by Henry before his death, and thus was begun the material growth of scores of noble families now high in the peerage of England. Many of those to whom grants were made were courtiers; others were doubtless fortune hunters and adventurers, as we would use the terms now; but the times of Henry VIII were different times from ours. Unquestionably there was among the beneficiaries of royal bounty a large element of worthy and able men who thus were repaid for substantial services in promoting policies pursued by a man who was one of the greatest of England's Kings.

At the time of the grant to William Halsey, Henry was at the height of his personal mastery of English institutions. Such was his recognized eminence that in Parliament when his name was spoken members were accustomed to rise, and bow to the vacant throne. He had then ruled for thirty-six years, but a life of uninterrupted conflict crowned with great success was drawing rapidly to a close. More, Wolsey and Cromwell, all were dead, and Henry had just been married to the last of his six ill-starred wives, and two years later he passed away. William Halsey at the time the grant was made was described as "of the Parsonage."

Here at the Parsonage the family continued to live for some generations after the grant. Additions from time to time were made to the residence until it became a commodious country place, sheltered in a small park of fine timber, including beech and hollys, many of the latter having stems three feet in circumference, and a height of twenty feet. On the place exists an ancient well of great depth from which water was long raised by donkeys walking on a large wheel, similar in design to the wheel used in the cage of a squirrel. "The process of raising the water in this manner," writes Thomas Frederick Halsey in his letter of March, 1894, "was so slow as to be quite unsuited to modern requirements and it was found necessary about ten years ago to replace it with ordinary pumping machinery, though from its curiosity the change was not made without regret."

Great Gaddesden lies a short distant west of the Parsonage, and derives its name from the River Gade which rises near the village. The village is as old as the time of the Conqueror, and the Church belongs to the style of 1280. Two miles from the place remains of the Roman rule in Britain have been unearthed. This part of Hertfordshire lies about twenty-eight miles north of London, near the head waters of two streams, one of which flows into the Thames just below Eton, and the other northward into the Ouse, whence its course is to the German Ocean.

Hertfordshire is famous among English counties for beauty and healthfulness, attractions which have dotted its map from end to end with the country homes of noblemen and the landed gentry, including Knebworth where Bulwer Lytton lived, and Hatfield, the home of Lord Salisbury. Other literary associations attach it to the biographies of Bacon, Cowper and Lamb, while it has eminence as the birthplace of Nicholas Breakspeare, afterwards Pope Adrian IV, the only Pope that England ever gave to Rome. The air of Hertfordshire has remarkable dryness, and salubrity. London physicians for generations have recommended it to their patients, so that among real estate men a saying long ago was current that "He who buys a home in Hertfordshire pays two years' purchase for the air." To this healthfulness beauty is added by winding brooks and rivers, by lands broken to the eye with gentle undulations or hills and valleys, by vegetation that is luxuriant, and by thriving hedgerows out of which rise lofty oak trees marking the lines of many ancestral homes.

Descendants of William Halsey for 350 years have continued to live on this Hertfordshire estate. About 1773 was built by Thomas Halsey, the great-grandfather of Thomas Frederick, the stately residence since occupied by his descendants, the architect being James Wyatt. In that day Wyatt had celebrity in England. Having studied classical architecture in Rome, he returned to become one of the most popular of English architects. He reared royal buildings at Kew, but is best known as the architect of that monumental structure, with its Gothic arches and lofty towers, which William Beckford, "England's wealthiest son," caused to rise under the name of Fonthill Abbey, only to see its towers afterward crumble to the ground of their own weight. Around this new residence of Gaddesden Place spreads out a domain of about three thousand acres, from which noble views may be had, one of them reaching to Harrow-on-the-Hill, the famous school where Peel and Byron swam together in the pool and played on the green.

John Halsey, a descendant of William, received knighthood, and is described as "of the kindred of William of Wyckham."* Sir John Halsey became one of the Masters in Chancery. Thomas Halsey in 1679 was High Sheriff of Hertfordshire, and the same office was afterwards held by his son Charles in 1746. Frederick Halsey, who died in 1762, served in Germany as Commissary General of the Allied Army, and afterward was made aide-de-camp to the hereditary Prince of Wolfenbuttel. Sarah Halsey in 1804 was married to Joseph T. Whately, a brother of the Archbishop.

The present head of the English family, Thomas Frederick Halsey, Esquire, M. P., was elected to Parliament for the County of Hertford in 1874 and again at the general election in 1880. The Redistribution of Seats Act of 1885 having divided the county into four divisions, each returning one member, Mr. Halsey was elected for the Western or Watford Division of the County of Hertford at the ensuing general election in 1885 and at the following ones in 1886 and 1892, and still sits for that division, in which a portion of the Gaddesden estate is situated. He belongs to the Conservative party. A few years ago he made a visit to this country when several of his kinsmen enjoyed the rare pleasure of making his acquaintance. At Great Gaddesden lie buried numerous members of the family in a private chapel erected in the last century near the ancient church. Its builder was Henshaw Halsey.

* William of Wyckham was born in 1324, and beside being Bishop of Winchester became Lord Chancellor in the reign of Edward III. He was eminent as a founder and builder of historic edifices. At his instigation Edward pulled down, and re-erected Windsor Castle, giving to him the sole supervision of the work. He was the founder of New College, Oxford, and of Winchester College, and the builder of the noblest part of Winchester's Cathedral. Lord Brougham in his "English Worthies" describes him as "one of the very few men who, having raised themselves by their ability and integrity to riches and honor, worked not sordidly for themselves to heap up treasure, but nobly employed their wealth in works of the highest public utility."

THOMAS FREDERICK HALSEY, M.P.

III. THOMAS HALSEY IN ENGLAND AND ITALY.

In the direct line of Thomas, however, the men that most concern us in this genealogy are the four who were his immediate ancestors. Concerning them we have the following information, beginning with John, whose life supplies us with the earliest authentic date in the direct chain of our history—1512.

John Halsey of the Parsonage is mentioned in 1512 as witness to a deed now belonging to Thomas Frederick Halsey. In a lease of the Rectory, dated March 20th, 1520, he is named as the father of William Halsey.

William Halsey, son of John of the Parsonage, executed his will on May 14th, 1546. It was proved on July 2nd of the same year and mentions his wife Alice, whose will, dated August 28th, 1557, was proved on December 2nd of that year.

William Halsey, the second son of William and Alice, is mentioned in the will of each parent, and was buried at Great Gaddesden May 16th, 1596. His wife was Anne ———, whom he married at Great Gaddesden on December 3d, 1559. His will is dated January 21st, 1596, and was proved in the following June.

Robert Halsey, the third son of William and Anne, married Dorothy, daughter of William Downes, of Linslade, Buckinghamshire. He was buried at Great Gaddesden on October 12th, 1618. His will, dated October 5th, was proved on November 4th of the same year. His wife was buried on September 23d, 1620, and her will was proved at St. Albans. Triamore Halsey, a brother of Robert, was buried in St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, on September 16th, 1630, where twelve years before had been buried Sir Walter Raleigh, and where also lies Caxton, England's first printer.

Thomas Halsey, our Puritan ancestor, was the fourth son of Robert and Dorothy, whose children were fourteen in number. The eldest was William, who was baptized in 1590 and died in 1637, the year that Thomas is known to have been living at Lynn, Massachusetts. From William is descended Thomas Frederick Halsey. The second brother was Duncomb, a mercer in London, who died before 1633. The third brother was James, a graduate of Clare College, Cambridge, who became rector of St. Alphage, London, in the chancel of which he was buried on March 12th, 1641. To William and James was granted on January 22nd, 1633, the coat of arms which will be described elsewhere in this introduction.

Thomas Halsey was born at the Parsonage and baptized in the church on January 2nd, 1591–2, from which we may assume that his birth occurred near the end of 1591. This child came into a world stirred to its depths by events of far reaching significance. That Princess Elizabeth, who was 12 years old when her father made the grant to William Halsey, had now been seated for thirty-two years on her father's and her sister's throne. Not only had she successfully called into life again the Church of England as a protestant faith, but the Tudor mastery set up by her father she had continued with old time force and splendor. Three years before Thomas Halsey's birth, Mary, Queen of Scots, had been executed. One year before it Elizabeth had won England's mightiest naval victory in the overthrow of the Spanish Armada, and thus had established for all time England's rank as a great sea power. This victory gave the seal to England's complete deliverance from Rome and from Rome's Spanish ally. From this event, moreover, dates England's real activity in the affairs of that new world beyond the great waters which Spanish gold, a century before, had enabled Columbus to discover, and in the peopling of which Thomas Halsey, in the next century, with some thousands of other Englishmen, was to have an individual's share.

But this English world into which our ancestor was born has other and very memorable distinction. It was the age of Spenser, Shakespeare and Bacon. The year in which Thomas saw the light was the year in which Spenser made public his "Faerie Queene," an event that has been elevated to the highest historic rank as deciding the grave problem whether the world ever was to have any such product as English poetry. Previous to its appearance "no great imaginative poem had broken the silence of English literature for nearly two hundred years."* Now, however, there was proof that English was to become a great literary language.

Shakespeare, in 1591, was 28 years old and had been about five years in London, winning such fame and income as he could as an actor and mender of old plays. It was in Thomas Halsey's boyhood that he won fame as something more. When Thomas was living in London as a young man, Shakespeare's plays had all been acted in that rude but renowned theatre on the banks of the Thames. The poet himself had retired to Stratford and had died and been buried there, sleeping well after a short life that was more than a "fitful fever." Francis Bacon, in 1591, was a rising lawyer with fame before him, but in 1597 his "Essays" laid the foundations of his acknowledged greatness and before Thomas left England he had become Lord Chancellor. Bacon's home and birthplace was at St. Albans, only six miles distant from Great Gaddesden Parsonage. Near St. Albans is the site of that Roman town of Verulam from which Bacon took his baronial title, as from St. Albans he took his viscounty. At St. Albans, in 1626, all of Bacon that could die was laid away.

Thomas Halsey's father died in 1618 and in his will made mention of Thomas, as did also Thomas's uncle, who died in 1633. Thomas in 1621 was living in Naples, Italy.† Through what circumstances he went there we do not know. From his father's estate he had received some part of his inheritance, and the same spirit of adventure or enterprise which afterwards took him to the New World may account for his Italian sojourn. Italian travel at that time was very popular in England, as was Continental travel generally. A desire to know the world pervaded most intelligent minds, being part of that intellectual awakening and material expansion which pre-eminently characterized the period. No Continental land was then influencing England more than Italy, as well by her poetry and romance as by her art and history. How long Thomas Halsey remained in Italy we do not know, but before coming to America he had engaged in trade in London as a mercer and this appears to have been after the Italian visit rather than before it. Of his sojourn in Italy we have a pleasing souvenir in the following letter endorsed "To his loving brother, Mr. William Halsey, at his parsonage of Great Gaddesden":—

"Loving Brother: I commend me to you with desire to hear of your health. You may hereby understand that I have given orders to my brother Duncomb Halsey to receive of you the ten pounds due to me the 29th September next A. D. 1621. And in regard that I cannot myself be with you to receive the same and that I am uncertain when it shall please God to call me for England, I have thought good to give my brother Duncomb Halsey a letter of attorney and by virtue thereof hee may give you a general acquittance for all such money as I have received or that hee shall receive of you for my use, and as you have made good payment to me of all such moneys as have been due to me, so it is my desire that you should have a general discharge to your own contentment. And I hope that the said acquittance given by my brother Duncomb Halsey will be of as good force and virtue as though it were my own handwriting.

"I understand that there is some money due to me by you and given me by my mother. How much it is I know not, but what it is I desire you to pay it to my brother D. Halsey and he shall give you discharge for the same. I am sorry that I cannot be with you to give you the discharge which I ought, but I think my letter of attorney, made to my brother Duncomb Halsey, will be of force for him to make you a full discharge. If not when it shall please God to send me for England I will be ready to give you an acquittance of what you shall think needful.

"I have been in this place about 3 months and here do intend to remain for some time if God send me health, this place being very healthful to live in but the condition of the people very bad. Yet, if a man can avoid giving of offense he may live quiet. News I have not any worth writing; therefore I omit to enlarge, I entreating you to remember my best love to my sister. With my commending to all my brothers and sisters with you I commend you to the protection of the Almighty and rest.

"Your Loving Brother,

"From Naples, THOMAS HALSEY.
this 18th of August Anno 1621."

The power of attorney referred to in this letter is as follows; the original of it and of the letter itself being in the possession of Thomas Frederick Halsey:

"Know all men to whom this present writing shall come that I Thomas Halsey sonne of Robert Halsey of Great Gaddesden Parsonage in the county of Hertford lately deceased, do hereby ordain, institute and give full power to my brother Duncomb of London, merchant, to demand, recover and receive of my brother William Halsey all such sums of money or moneys as either are or shall be due to me by my brother, William Halsey, for legacies or deed of gifts given me by my father, Robert Halsey, or by any other and now in the hands of my brother, William Halsey, and I do hereby for me, my heirs and executors give full power and authority to my said brother Duncomb Halsey to give acquittance or general release to the said William Halsey for all such sum of money or moneys as formerly I have received or that he, the said Duncomb Halsey, shall receive of him for my use.
In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal.

per me THOMAS HALSEY.

Napoli in Italy 18th Aug. A. D. 1621, Stilo Anglia."

The grant of arms from the Herald's College to the two brothers of Thomas made in 1633 is as follows: Argent on a pile sa. three griffins heads erased of the first. Crest, a cubit arm, gules, cuff, ar. hand proper holding a griffin's leg erased, or; the motto, nescit vox missa reverti. This motto is a quotation from Horace's "De Arte Poetica." Thomas Frederick Halsey, in a letter to Edmund D. Halsey of Morristown, N. J., dated March 23d, 1885, says of the relations of Thomas to this grant:

"As to the arms we bear the grant from the Herald's College gives them to William and to his brother James, D. D. Probably at this time Thomas had gone to America and his existence was not known and therefore he was not mentioned. I fancy there is no doubt that if he had been known to be alive at that time he would also have been recognized as entitled to bear the same arms as his brothers, and therefore I should fancy his descendants would be entitled to bear our arms."

IV. THOMAS HALSEY'S LIFE IN AMERICA.

Thomas Halsey's coming to America apparently was connected with the colonization enterprises of which John Winthrop became the leader. The men who founded the Massachusetts Bay Colony, like the men of the older settlements at Plymouth, were Puritans, but they were Puritans of a milder and more worldly type. Winthrop's men sought not only a land where God might be worshipped after their own consciences, but one where towns could be planted, farms made productive and property could be acquired. While still in England, they had received full and authentic reports of the freedom which their countrymen enjoyed at Plymouth, and as the despotism of Charles I. increased until in 1629 the power of Parliament ceased altogether, their desire to leave the mother land grew in force. Puritans as they were in spirit, their leader, Winthrop, had originally been a Church of England man and so had others who joined the company. Winthrop set sail in 1630 and many shiploads followed him to Boston Bay in succeeding years, so that from the town on Beacon Hill settlements spread rapidly inland hastening the growth of Salem and building up a town at Lynn.

To the latter place came Thomas Halsey as early as 1637.* He may have reached Boston before 1633, the year of the grant

* A family named Halsey has been found in the Boston, Mass., records of 1635, but it appears to have died out with the second generation. From Boston came a Capt. John Halsey of whose deeds on the high seas record has been made in a volume published at Hartford by Henry Benton in 1829 with the title "The History of the Pirates, containing the Lives of those noted Pirate Captains Misson, Bowen, Kidd, Tew, Halsey," etc. The author remarks that Capt. Halsey, though he resolved upon turning pirate, intended to rob only Moor ships. After an adventurous career he died of a fever in Madagascar, and "was buried with great solemnity and ceremony; the prayers of the Church of England were read over him, colors were flying, and his sword and pistol laid on his coffin, which was covered with a ship's jack, as many minute guns fired as he was years old, viz. 46, and three English vollies and one French volley of small arms. He was brave in his person, courteous to all his prisoners, lived beloved, and died regretted by his own people. His grave was made in a garden of watermelons and fenced in with palisades to prevent his being rooted up by wild hogs of which there are plenty in these parts." A family of Halseys existed in Providence, R. I., about one hundred years ago, one of whom was Thomas Lloyd Halsey, a quartermaster in the Revolutionary army, but they disappeared some years since in South America.

of arms. In one of the records that have survived a fire at Lynn, it is recorded that in 1638 he was allotted one hundred acres of land. Just what his relations were to the Winthrop movement we can only conjecture. He had undoubtedly been reared in the established Church, but there is room for conjecture that in the conflict between the King and Parliament his sympathies went with the latter, while other members of the family adhered to the fortunes of the King.* We, at any rate, know that the dominant spirit at Lynn was the spirit of a pure democracy. The men who founded that place were not men who could have meekly endured the growing tyranny of Charles, or the rapid widening of the evil potency of Laud. The men of Lynn believed they were calling into life a commonwealth, new in structure and wholly free. Their lands were held in common, and in frequent town meetings were decided all graver questions affecting individuals and the community at large.

The year 1637 was a critical date in the history of New England. Steadily for some years events had shown how the colony was drifting onward to that state of religious intolerance which, to this age, is as incomprehensible as it is shocking. In 1635 had occurred the incident of Endicott and the Red Cross, and in the same year was banished Roger Williams, the man who, on the bleak shores of Rhode Island, was to set up the very earliest great example of toleration. In the Bay Colony just before that date, Sir Harry Vane, who afterwards was to win other fame in the old country in the time of Cromwell, had been not only Governor of the province, but a shining leader of broader religious views. In 1637, however, by the voice of the people, Vane was superseded as Governor by Winthrop, whose rise to office at this time meant that a long period of tyranny was at hand.

* In 1654 Cromwell took occasion of a plot against the government which had been discovered, to make an order "that all who had born arms for the King, or had declared themselves to be of his party, should be decimated, or pay a tenth part of their estates to support the charge of such extraordinary forces as their turbulent and seditious practices oblig'd him to keep up." * * He likewise committed to prison many of those whom he suspected, as the Earl of Oxford; the Lords Willoughby of Parham, Newport, and Compton, Littleton, Peyton, Packington, Ashburnham, Russel, Legg, Phillips, Halsey and several others." Kimber's Life of Cromwell, pg. 315, &c. It is an ancient tradition in the family that Thomas Halsey came to this country in the ship in which Cromwell was about to take passage when restrained by the order of Charles I.

In the same year met the first synod of Massachusetts, which for twenty-four days was engaged in the arduous pursuit of hunting heresy, with the result of finding eighty-two cases worthy to be called "blasphemous," and nine that were "unwholesome." In November of this year was tried and banished Anne Hutchinson, whose melancholy fate on the borders of New York and Connecticut has been told in many moving chronicles. Banishment also became the fate of John Wheelwright, while graver punishments were meted out eventually to Quakers and the witches. Of this first synod Charles Francis Adams has said that it "set the step by which the Puritan commonwealth marched through the lives of two generations."*

Our ancestor Thomas Halsey remained a citizen of Lynn during this stirring epoch. It is possible that the migration to Long Island in 1640, of which he formed a part, was connected with these religious matters. Winthrop in his "History"† remarks that the Long Island company "finding themselves straightened, looked about for a new plantation," which need not of necessity mean that they were in want of money, for it is quite clear that they were not. It is more probable that the reference was to religious straits. They were able to make their departure peacefully enough, having obtained the consent of Winthrop. On March 10th of the previous year articles of agreement had been signed at Lynn, Thomas Halsey being one of the signers, describing the conditions and terms under which the new settlement was to be founded. Captain Daniel Howe had been engaged to transport the company, and it was provided that his ship should be at Lynn three times during the year—in March, June and October—ready to convey goods and passengers to the new Long Island lands.

These lands were to be purchased and laid out, but were not to be divided. "Whatsoever we lay out for farms shall remain so," they said, and in case any person sold his property he was not to divide it, but was to sell "house, lot and plantings, or lots and meadows, entirely, and if he sell his farm he shall not divide it but sell it together, viz: his farm entirely and his accommodations in town entirely. "There was to be a limit of four acres to house lots and twelve to the plantinge lot," while the meadows and uplands might make thirty-four or fifty acres for each holder. Other lands were held in common. One of the clauses concerning religion has been interpreted as meaning that they desired a kind of union of church and state such as existed in the theocracy of the Bay Colony. It was agreed in April, 1640, that they should occupy eight square miles in any part of Long Island, the amount to be paid for it to be fixed by Gov. Winthrop, who said that, inasmuch as the country was a wilderness, four bushels of corn would be fair. The purchase was made from Lord Stirling through his agent, James Farrett. Originally the Long Island lands had belonged to the Plymouth Colony from whom Stirling had obtained them. In 1640 when Stirling died his heirs relinquished their claim to the English King.

The first ship's load reached Long Island early in May at a place known as Cow Bay and now called Manhasset, a bay which indents the shore from Long Island Sound in the town of North Hempstead, about twenty miles east of Hell Gate. Here they landed, and finding the Dutch arms set up Capt. Howe took them down, and an Indian drew in their place "an unhandsome face." Only a portion of the Lynn company went on the first voyage, and Thomas Halsey probably was one of those who did not go. Those who went were an advance party, sent out to see if the land was good, and in case it proved to be so, it was intended that others in large numbers should follow.

When the Dutch on Manhattan Island heard that their arms had been taken down, they sent Cornelius Van Tienhoven to Cow Bay with twenty-five soldiers under orders to bring the offenders to New Amsterdam, "taking care above all things to avoid all bloodshed." Six men were accordingly conveyed to New Amsterdam, and it having been shown that Capt. Howe and not the settlers had taken down the arms they were discharged "on conditions that they do promise to depart forthwith from our territory and never return to it without the Directors express consent." Before going they were obliged to sign an agreement to depart from Cow Bay, "on pain of being punished as perverse usurpers subjecting ourselves not only to this but to all other courts in the world." During their imprisonment in New Amsterdam these men sent a letter to Gov. Winthrop which gave evidence that they were men of some learning for it was written in Latin.*

On leaving Cow Bay the pioneers sought another place for a settlement. They found it at the eastern end of Long Island where the others from Lynn joined them at a place which they named Southampton. They reached these lands in the first half of June,† and it is contended that here was founded the first settlement ever made by Englishmen within the present limits of New York State. To the Indians for their interest in the lands at Southampton, they gave sixteen coats, and sixty bushels of corn, with a promise to defend them against other Indians. This agreement was dated Dec. 13th, 1640.

Before winter set in a rude church had been erected in the new settlement. It remained Congregational for a time, but was soon changed to the Presbyterian denomination. Its pastor was the Rev. Abraham Pierson, who had come from Lynn. The form of town government established did not radically differ from that of the Bay Colony. Church and town were practically one, and in the town meeting resided all power. There were no appeals except to the higher court at Hartford, Conn. Southampton offers an example of a pure democracy, with the town meeting voting taxes, sitting as a court and imposing fines. For these purposes it assembled once a month. Every freeholder was required to be present and was fined if he did not come. During the first five years such was the danger of attack that the inhabitants were obliged to attend church armed for defence. When, in 1645, a modification was made in this regulation, it dispensed with carrying arms only for the winter months—from November 1st until March 1st. No one was allowed to sell strong liquors "except our neighbor John Cooper," and he to no Indian and not more than 100 gallons in each year.

Besides farming, the people engaged in whaling and the industry was continued from father to son. One of the inhabitants named Mulford, in 1715, declared that for above sixty years it had been the custom of the people "to go out upon the seas adjacent to their lands, six men in a small boat, to take and kill whales and other fish, and the captains to have all they killed brought on shore and left dead or wounded; so that they came on shore with wind or sea, which continued for above 50 years before the captors heard of any duty for so doing until of late, by violent proceedings, frightened some to do it, when generally it was looked upon to be an imposition contrary to the law of the colony." Mr. Mulford added that "The custom of whale fishing is a free custom, because there is not any law to prohibit it. It is an ancient custom, to the third and fourth generation. It is more ancient than the colony of New York and not in any man's memory to the contrary till of late."* Forty years before this (in 1673) the towns on the eastern end of Long Island had united in a petition which was read before the King, at Whitehall, London, setting forth that they had "spent much time and pains and the greatest part of their estates in settling the trade of whale fishing in the adjacent seas, having endeavored it above these twenty years, but could not bring it to any perfection till within these two or three years last past." In the early days Indians were employed in the industry. They furnished the boats and whaling gear and shared in the profits.

The town for some years grew slowly in population. In 1650 only ten or twelve houses were standing. It was an exposed kind of life that the inhabitants found themselves forced to lead, surrounded as they were by Indians. In 1649 some Indians murdered the wife of Thomas Halsey, whose Christian name appears to have been Phœbe, but this is all that we know of her or her family. Wyandoch, a friendly chief, was suspected of the murder and at once gave himself up, declaring his innocence. He had already seized the true murderers, two Pequot Indians from the main land. They were sent to Hartford, tried, convicted and executed. In July 1660 Thomas Halsey, described as "of Southampton in the jurisdiction of Connecticut, husbandman," declared that he took "Ann Jones, the wife of Edward Jones, lately deceased, in marriage contract to be my espoused wife." He renounced all right or claim to any of the lands, goods or chattels of Jones. This second wife survived him.

It is recorded of Thomas Halsey that he "remained many years in Southampton and was the richest man in the place;" that he had much influence in town affairs, was active in establishing the Connecticut jurisdiction, and in 1669 was a representative.* The first part of this statement is open to question. It is more probable that Edward Howell surpassed in wealth the other settlers.

From the town records it is plain that Thomas Halsey was not only an active citizen, but one possessed of independence of spirit and a strong will, and not always respectful to his fellow townsmen. He had been well educated, and in accordance with the distinctions of those times, was styled "gentleman" in the records. The first recorded instance of his independent spirit is dated March 15th, 1643, when he was censured in town meeting "for some irreverent speech to Daniel Howe in Court, being then a Magistrate, who acknowledged his offence and promised to make the like acknowledgement the next quarter court." In 1646 he was Marshal and in March of this year was censured "for hindering the quiet proceedings of the Court and causing them to loose their time by his willful obstinacy and for the unjust charging of the Court for justifying the actions of Mr. Howe, for which offence he is required forthwith to make public acknowledgement and to pay five shillings for his fine." Under the same date it is recorded that "Thomas Halsey upon his refusal to make acknowledgement of those things for which he was censured is fined to pay the sum of 40s.;" but in a foot note it is explained that "Thomas Halsey had his fine remitted by the general court holden March 3rd, 1647."

* Lewis and Newhall's History of Lynn.

In June, 1654, there was "great disturbance" at court by reason of "the departure of some of the members thereof." Fines were imposed and it was ordered that Thomas Halsey "shall pay moreover 5s. for his contemptuous carriage unto the court at his departure." He was the loser in a suit for trespass in 1654 and appealed to Hartford, being "bound in the sum of £40 to prosecute there." Other suits he won. In October, 1655, he had "a difference with the town in regard to his two closes" in which he acknowledges himself "sorry for his fault therein and desireth of the town their courtesy therein, whereupon the town does consent unto the said Thomas Halsey that he shall have his said closes in particular to himself," he agreeing to keep up his fences.

Some of the other mentions of his name in the town records are entitled to notice here. In 1654 he was one of a committee appointed "to peruse the court papers and to regulate the court books and to reserve what is of use and to cashier the rest." In 1659 he was one of twelve men appointed with authority again to sift the court papers; "also to set down which of the laws in the law book from Hartford shall be and at all times and in all cases to be esteemed to be our laws." It is obvious from the extent of the fences he was expected to keep up at this time, and from the allotments made to him, that he was an extensive owner of land and apparently the largest in the place.

In the Connecticut records of a court of election held at Hartford in 1661 is an agreement between Captain Topping, Thomas Halsey, Mr. Stansborough and John Cooper "in behalf of all of Southampton unsatisfied about their bounds" and Mr. Baker and Mr. Mulford in behalf of Easthampton fixing the boundary, "and this to stand as a final conclusion respecting the bounds twixt those two plantations."

On Nov. 23, 1663, Thomas Halsey was appointed one of five to meet a Committee from East Hampton and Southold to act for the town in dividing the money due to Capt. Scott (who, it seems, had purchased some lands for the town) "and alsoe to agree and conclude with the said Committee what government and lawes to be ordered by, in case wee prove not to bee under or to bee taken off from Conectacut jurisdiction," but on Feb'y 10, 1663-4, Thomas Halsey, Sen., "absolutely refusing to doe townes servis in that ocasion as above specified," John Jessup was appointed in his place. "April 25 1664 at a town meeting It is ordered by voat yt 2 Inhabitants shall be sent as deputies to ye Cort at Hartford, the men are Tho. Halsey Sen. & John Jessup." These notes, taken from the town records, indicate that Thomas Halsey was of opinion that the "Conectacut jurisdiction" covered his town.

Other items seem to fix the site of his residence. Thus in 1647 he was allowed to have three acres of forty-eight acres laid out sixteen poles wide running back to a pond and enclosing what had formerly been a road along the pond. This is believed to refer to his "home lot." His son Thomas afterwards lived on it and still later Captain Isaac Halsey. Twenty years ago it was occupied by Thomas Nichols White. In 1657 Thomas Halsey's house was appointed as a rallying place for the people at the South end of the town in case "there be any alarm in the night."

The incident at Cow Bay did not prove to be the last difficulty with the Dutch. There followed more than one period of excitement over the fate of the settlement. Indeed it was not until within six years of Thomas Halsey's death that all danger of Dutch aggression ceased forever. It is unlikely that the Dutch ever looked kindly upon the substitution of Southampton for the Cow Bay settlement. We know at least that in 1650 they desired to purchase from the Indians the whole of their title to Long Island and thus to shut in the towns of Southampton and Southold, and "secure the whole to New Netherland."* In the following year, in a Dutch state paper attributed to Peter Stuyvesant, it was declared that Long Island "rightfully belongs both by first purchase, possession and ancient resort, to the Dutch nation and not to the English."

Thirteen years later the island of Manhattan passed from Dutch to English hands. There had been an act of war committed, but no shedding of blood. The capitulation, however, was one the great events in the history of the English people, for out of it proceeded forces which ultimately determined whether a Teutonic or a Latin people should dominate the North American Continent. After this event, Eastern Long Island, which until now had been a part of the Connecticut Colony, was added to the Province of New York, a dispute as to the Connecticut boundary line being ended by an agreement to run the line north and south twenty miles east of the Hudson river and to give Long Island to New York.

This decision caused much dissatisfaction among the Southampton people, who had become attached to Connecticut. What they liked best was the free institution of that community, the town meeting, with its initiatory and comprehensive authority, and that whole spirit of democracy which Connecticut, first among the Colonies, had planted and developed on American soil. When the English authorities at New York sent out town officers to serve at Southampton the people refused positively to receive them. They also declined to pay any taxes to royal officials. But in the end they had to yield to the stronger force.

That Thomas Halsey was actively concerned in these town affairs has been shown on a preceding page. As stated, he was one of a committee appointed to consider the question of government and laws, "in case we prove not to be under or to be taken off from Connecticut jurisdiction." Several months later the words just quoted were stricken out, and the committee received full power "to settle and establish laws both civil and ecclesiastical as near as they can according to God." This alteration being contrary to his views, we find him "absolutely refusing to do town service in that occasion as above specified."

In 1673 the Dutch again for a short time secured control of Manhattan Island. In August they called upon the Southampton people to submit to them "and to send hitherto immediately their deputies, together with their constables' staves and English flags, when they would, as circumstances permit, be furnished with Prince's flags instead of the English." The Southampton people meanwhile had complained bitterly that "we were sometimes rightly and peacefully joined with Hartford jurisdiction to good satisfaction on both sides; but about the year 1664 Gov. Richard Nicolls coming in the name of the Duke of York, by power subjected us to the government under which we have remained until the present time and now by turn of God's providence ships of force belonging to the States of Holland have taken New York the 30th of the last month."

They very naturally knew not what to do, but when the Dutch summons reached them they declared in reply that if they came under Dutch rule, they desired "to retain our ecclesiastical privileges, viz., to worship God according to our belief without any imposition." They would be bound not to act against the Dutch, but desired not to take up arms for them against our own nation." The Southampton people together with the people from other Long Island towns, said they desired to be "a corporation of themselves, to end all matters of difference between man and man, excepting only cases concerning life, limb and banishment," as well as free liberty "for the procuring from any of the united colonies (without molestation on either side) warpes iron, or any other necessaries for the comfortable carrying on of the whale design."*

By the Dutch the most of these requests were acceded to, though not in a way to command confidence at Southampton where, in a town meeting on October 1st, it was affirmed that as certain privileges "seemingly granted, now by their pretended body of laws are overthrown, therefore we can not but fear them, and we are not willing to trust them any further." As to taking the Dutch oath of allegiance they declared that "we utterly deny any other Sovereign lord over us than his most sacred majesty of England, and therefore cannot in conscience swear to any foreign power." Hearing of these matters the Dutch took steps "to bring under and subdue the said malefactors;" but it was advised that a delegate be first sent to administer the oath, thus giving the Southampton people another opportunity for peaceful submission. John Cooper of Southampton was in New York when the delegate was about to start on his journey and publicly advised him "to take care and not appear with that thing at Southampton"—advice which he more than once repeated. By "that thing" Cooper explained that he meant the Prince's flag. Mr. Cooper finally gave this further admonition: "rest satisfied that I warn you to take care that you come not with that flag within range of shot of our village." A few weeks after this incident, the treaty was signed which gave New York back to the English, who thenceforth were to retain it for more than a hundred years.

In those stirring town affairs Thomas Halsey participated, but in the late ones only as an old man could. He died in 1679, five years after the English authority on Manhattan Island was restored. He was then within two years of ninety. His will was proven in New York City where it still remains among the records in Book A. With Governor Sir Edmund Andross's certification to the letters testamentary attached to it, the will reads as follows:—

The valuation here placed on Thomas Halsey's personal property alone would now represent a considerable estate. About the time Thomas died, Gov. Andross, in a report on the province, said a merchant in New York City worth £500 or £600 was a "good substantial merchant." The larger portion of Thomas's property, however, comprised his holdings of real estate.

V. SOME OF THOMAS'S DESCENDANTS.

Thomas Halsey, as his will indicates, left four children surviving him, of whom three were sons, Thomas, Isaac and Daniel, and one was a daughter, Elizabeth, the wife of Richard, son of Edward Howell. The sons had all been born before 1631, Thomas about 1627, Isaac about 1628 and Daniel about 1630. Could we know the places of their birth, we might have better knowledge as to the exact time when the father landed on these shores, for if any one of them was born in this country Thomas had obviously arrived as early as 1630, while it is again clear that if all were born in England, Thomas sailed away some time between 1630 and 1637 when already possessed of three small children. The latter inference, on some grounds—and especially on the grounds of the children—appears the least tempting. Still, it is to be remembered that Thomas lived in stern and daring times and that a stout heart beat beneath his doublet. To the Puritans of that age, the perils of the sea, even with children to take on the voyage, offered fewer terrors than the usurpations of the Stuarts.

When the father died, the three sons were men in middle life. Thomas was already a lad of about thirteen when the migration to Southampton took place. He is first mentioned in the town records of Southampton in 1644 when there was a division of citizens into wards, "for the prevention of disorder," arising from divisions of whales that might be cast up on the shore. The elder Thomas was then in the second ward and the younger in the first. It is argued that at this time the younger Thomas must have been at least sixteen years of age in order to receive such consideration. This would place his birth before 1628.

Before the death of the elder Thomas the three sons had already become land owners. On April 15th, 1656, Richard Barrett "hath put of his allotment in Sagaponack division to Thomas Halsey Jr." In 1663 John Woodruff sold to Thomas his "lot in Mill Neck over against the piece of land called Cobs Pound, also three roods of ground in fist Neck in the great plaine" in exchange for "five acres in the ten acre lot furlong in great plaine." In 1663, in a "proposal by the neighborhood where they desire to have their present division to lie," we find the younger Thomas with "fifty acres adjoining to the rear of his lot at Cobs Pound, eight acres at his land in Mill Neck;" with Isaac on the "north side of Robert Wooley at the west side North sea path," and Daniel with "one hundred and fifty between Mr. Rainer and Joseph against the little plaine." The three sons again are mentioned in 1657 when a half pound of powder was to be delivered "out of the Magazine" to each of forty persons, among whom were Thomas, Isaac and David (Daniel).* In an "Estimate of the town of Southampton in the year 1683 Thomas was assessed at £411, 16s. 8d. and 3 poles and Isaac at £345 and 2 poles."† The sons all survived the father many years. Thomas died about 1699, Isaac about 1725 and Daniel about 1682.

The land at Southampton comprised a territory of some 6,000 acres. As the population increased, the restrictions imposed on the division of the territory made it necessary for younger generations to seek lands elsewhere. The earliest to go were grandchildren of the elder Thomas. Isaac's son Joseph went to Elizabeth, New Jersey, as early as 1694. Joseph's brother Samuel, and another Halsey named Daniel, who appears to have been a son of the younger Thomas, probably went to North Carolina. A settlement was made in that State in 1694 by Halseys bearing those Christian names and descendants of theirs are now living on Albemarle Sound. Daniel's son William in 1689 was living in New London, Connecticut. A William Halsey, of the fourth generation, went to Preston, Connecticut; Silas, also of the fourth, to Morristown, New Jersey; Recompense, about 1730, to Scotch Plains and thence to Morris County, New Jersey; and Ezekiel to New Jersey in 1753.

After the Revolution many of the family must have thrown themselves into that strong migratory current which so rapidly took up the western lands before the century closed. One of them was Silas who went to Oneida County, New York, and another was Matthew of the sixth generation who went to Springfield, Otsego Count. Southampton was a point from which colonists might conveniently go out by water, reaching Connecticut by the Sound and the New Jersey shore by South Bay and the Bay of New York. Some of the migrations have left records of themselves in geographical names. In Tioga County, N. Y., is a village called Halsey Valley; in Tompkins County is a settlement named Halseyville, while in Linn County, Oregon, exists another village bearing the unamplified name of Halsey. An important thoroughfare in Brooklyn is called Halsey street, as is also one of the principal streets in Newark.

A study of individual lives will show to what extent the family name has been associated with events in the history of this country. We have already seen some of the events in English and Continental history in which members of the family had their share. As the Halseys of Cornwall and Devon participated in the Wars of the Roses and in the siege of La Rochelle, so those of Hertfordshire, as a reward for services in Henry's time, obtained the Gaddesden grant, while descendants held county offices, served in Continental wars, or were punished under Cromwell for adhering to the cause of the King. Another of the Hertfordshire line bearing the Christian name of William subscribed 25 pounds for the defence of England against Spain's Armada.*

The life of Thomas likewise had close relations to stirring events in his time. Having sailed away from the old home to escape from the tyranny of the Stuarts, he became again a voluntary exile, in departing from the Bay Colony which, through religious intolerance, had become another land, where a free spirit such as his could not comfortably dwell. In the long warfare of the Colonists with the Indians, Thomas Halsey suffered the loss by violence of his wife, while in the conflict between the English and the Dutch for supremacy in New York he took part as a valiant Southampton man.

Among the Colonial records of New York may be found the names of Long Island Halseys, who took part in the French and Indian war—that conflict by which it was decided that an Anglo-Saxon and not a Latin civilization should prevail in North America—while in the Revolution, and notably at Fort Ticonderoga, others served. In the wars of 1812 and 1848 were representatives, and to California in 1849 went men of our race to find gold. In the Civil War were Halseys serving as privates, rising to official rank, or doing duty as volunteer surgeons. Nor should it be overlooked that during the prolonged conflict of the Christian powers against the Barbary Corsairs, John Halsey,* a captain of pirates so-called, gave his services to the cause in which Andrea Doria of Genoa and Stephen Decatur of our own republic won enduring fame. In civil life a large number have served the public—several as members of Congress, many more as State legislators, and a still greater number as county officials.

Numerous members of the family have never left the old home and many remain there to this day. Indeed the name is one of the commonest to be encountered by the summer resident at that charming and life-giving resort. Longevity has been marked in this family. Perhaps even those who were born and reared far from the place, may have inherited from the ancestral town some of those life forces which have carried them on to old age. If this be true, we have new and potent cause to reverence sincerely this last of the four towns (or five, counting Naples,) in which Thomas Halsey spent the years of his earthly pilgrimage.

GENEALOGY.

FIRST GENERATION.*

1.—Thomas Halsey, b. January 2, 1592. Mercer of London. Living at Naples Aug. 10, 1621; at Lynn, Mass., 1637. Was owner of 100 acres of land in that town; one of the founders of the town of Southampton, Long Island, 1640, the first English town in the State of New York. There was no other Halsey among them. Was delegate to the General Court at Hartford, Conn., 1664; joined in remonstrance Feb. 15, 1670. Nov. 1, 1676, named in the patent of confirmation. Named in Gov. Dongan's patent Dec. 6, 1686. Lived May 4, 1657, probably on Horse Mill Lane, which ran from Main Street to the Town Pond, 30 or 40 rods from where Francis Cook now lives in Southampton. In a list found in the Town records of 1657 of inhabitants living on westside of Main street, commencing at the north end, he is described as living in 8th house south from Isaac. His will dated July 28, 1677, is printed in the introduction, and is recorded in Book A of Wills, New York County. Married 1st, before 1627, Phœbe ———. She was murdered by two Pequot Indians in 1649. Md. 2d, July 25, 1660, Ann Johnes, wid. of Edward Johnes. Inventory £672, 9, 2.

* For the English line through four generations back from Thomas, the Puritan emigrant, see the Introduction.

SECOND GENERATION.

Children of 1 Thomas Halsey and Phœbe —— his first wife.

11.—Thomas, b. probably about 1627. The first mention of this man was in the records of Southampton, March 7, 1644, when he was enrolled among those 16 years old and over, in a whaling ward. In 1657 he was living among "Eastern men" probably at Mecox. His will was signed 1688, Aug. 3, disposing of his property which amounted to £248, 15s. The exact day of his death is unknown, but he was not living on 15 Sept., 1698. Mr. Isaac C. Halsey says he was buried in Hay Ground Graveyard in Bridgehampton, L. I. With his wife he joined in dividing his property between her and their children. Married Mary ———, who left a will dated Dec. 18, 1699, and died Dec. 20, 1699.

12.—Isaac, b. probably 1628–9, d. 1725? In a list of inhabitants, 1698, Isaac appears with several other Halseys. Was named as a Trustee of So. Hampton, Dec. 6, 1686, in Dongan patent. Lived on W. side Main st., near the N. end. July 3, 1712, living. A broken stone in g. y. at So. Hampton, says, "Isaac Halsey d. Jan. 31, 1725." It was probably grave of this Isaac. m. Mary ———.

13.—Daniel, b. about 1630–33, m. Jemima ———, d. about 1682, buried at Wickapogue g. y. Letters of adm. granted to his widow April 24, 1682. Inventory £964, 7s.

14.—Elizabeth, m., (as his 1st wife), Richard Howell, son of Edward Howell, one of the founders of Southampton, and Frances his wife. After her death he married a daughter of Joseph Raynor. His children are presumed by Rev. Geo. R. Howell, the historian, to be mostly the children of his first wife.

THIRD GENERATION.

Children of 11 Thomas Halsey and Mary his wife.

111.—Mary, b. Aug. 29, 1654, m. Nov. 8, 1677, Col. Matthew Howell, son of Major John Howell, who was b. Nov. 8, 1651. He was a representative for Suffolk Co. in Legislatures of 1691, 1692, and from 1694 to 1706. He distinguished himself for his independence and was expelled from the Legislature by the Governor April 17, 1701, but restored again by the people. His massive gravestone bearing the family arms still stands in the old grave yard at Southampton.

Halsey thinks his marriage might have been the cause of his removal.)

1694, Nov. 29. They proved title to 200 acres of land in Chowan Precinct, North Carolina. See Colonial Records of N. C., Vol. I, pg. 435. Daniel "proved" 50 acres each for himself, his wife, and two servants (John Aires and Richard Wakefield). The General Court of North Carolina, at a session held Nov. 28, 1694, ordered payment to be made to Daniel Halsey for attendance as a witness, Col. Rec. I, 430. This writ was issued by Glover as President of the Council and acting Governor. This was at the time of the famous fight for control of the Legislature of North Carolina by the Glover and Carey factions. Col. Rec. I, 696.

Jeremiah Halsey took an active part in the Rev. war. He spent more time and money than any other man in Connecticut except Gov. Trumbell and Gen. Putnam. May 1st, 1775, he was commissioned as Lieut. in Capt. Mott's Co., Col. Edward's Regiment, and joined the Northern Department. In the preparations to capture Ticonderoga he went from Hartford with others as far as Sheffield, Mass., when with Capt. John Stevens he was sent to Albany to discover the temper of the people. They thought it hazardous. He was with Ethan Allen in the capture of the fort which he with seven others had planned and carried out at their own expense, and was one of the men sent to Congress with his "present of a major, a captain, two lieutenants and 16 regulars." He was commissioned by Col. Hinman in command of the forces as captain of the armed sloop "Enterprise," and to command the fleet of vessels in the lake, and was thus the first naval commander of the U. S.

The following petition to Gen. Schuyler appears in the Am. Arch., vol. III, pg. 4, signed by a number of Regimental officers and Ethan Allen:

"To Gen. Schuyler and Gen. Trumbull, petition dated Crown Point, Aug. 1, '75, signed by Ethan Allen and other officers.

"Whereas, Jeremiah Halsey, Esq., was by Benjamin Hinman, Esq., when commander in chief on the North-Department appointed and commissioned. to be commodore of all the armed vessels and crafts on the Northern Lakes viz: Lake Champlain, George, &c.; and we, the subscribers, hereby certify since the said Halsey's appointment he hath behaved with the utmost prudence and good conduct, hath maintained the character of an honorable commander, faithfully discharged the duties of said office of Commander of the said Lakes, and is in our opinion a man of fortitude and resolution and possessed of every qualification necessary for the seaman or soldier, and well understands the business of an officer either by sea or land, and we would therefore desire your Honors, as the said Halsey is superseded in the command of said vessels by the Province of New York appointing a man to said office, either to discharge the said Halsey honorably from the service of the United Colonies or appoint him to an office in said service agreeable to his merits, which is the desire of your Honors' most obedient and humble servants."

He was present at the siege and capture of St. Johns as an engineer. In Dec. 1776, he was commissioned a captain in the Continental line. In Jan., 1780, he was commissioned as Lieut. Col. of 27 Reg. Militia for Preston. After the war he built a vessel of which the following account is taken from Caulkin's New London, p. 576:

"In 1786, a very singular vessel was constructed at Poquetanuck on the river Thames, ten miles from New London, by Jeremiah Halsey. She was double-decked, burden about 150 tons, and built almost wholly of plank, several courses being laid crossing each other at right angles. The only timbers in her were the keel, stem and stern post. She was firm, well-molded, graceful, and on coming down to New London in November excited very general curiosity. She was called a snow and named Lady Strange, but many people for her lightness called her the Balloon. In a storm which occurred Dec. 3d, while she was fitting for sea, she was driven directly over the sandy point of Shaw's Neck and stranded among the trees of an orchard on Close Cove, but was got off without damage and sailed for Ireland Jan. 19, 1787. She proved to be a good sea vessel and a fast sailer, and made several voyages from New London, but was afterwards owned in Philadelphia. According to a statement published soon after the death of Halsey, the ingenious architect of this vessel, she was examined at Philadelphia when 32 years old, and was at that time staunch and sound."

In 1792 with one Andrew Ward he contracted to finish the State House at Hartford for the State's title to "the Gore," a piece of land lying between New York and Pennsylvania. They completed the contract and took title to the land July 25, 1795. Mr. H. bought out Ward but the land proved to belong to New York and he lost it. He was afterward compensated in part by the Legislature.

He was a man of tall and commanding presence, sanguine temperment and great force and energy of character.

11851.—Jeremiah, (Rev.) b. 1733, was licensed Oct. 26, 1757, by New Brunswick Presby. and the same year became Tutor at Princeton. Dr. MacLean says of him that it was "to the great benefit of the institution and to the equally great satisfaction of the Trustees (he) held his office for ten years." The Board, at a meeting on Feb'y 16, 1757, adopted a minute advising Mr. Ewen to take charge of the Junior and Sophomore classes, "and that Mr. Halsey apply himself to the instruction of the Senior and Freshman classes."

It is noted in the minutes of the Trustees Oct. 1, 1767, that "Mr. Halsey, eldest Tutor of this College, now thought fit to resign his office and requesting testimonials in his favor from the Trustees, it is ordered, that an ample certificate be made out, to be signed by the clerk in the name of the Board and sealed with the corporation seal, certifying the said Mr. Halsey's faithful services and good conduct during his Tutorship in the College with Recommendation of him as a Gentleman of Genius, Learning and Real Merit." In 1769 he was chosen professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, but declined the appointment.

April 17, 1770, he was called to the pastorate of the Church at Lamington and was installed by the Presbytery of New Brunswick June 27. He was appointed on a committee to draft a pastoral letter to the people May 18, 1778, but dissented to its declarations of allegiance. He died "in the harness" as pastor of the Lamington Church, Oct. 2, 1780. He married in 1772 a Miss Henry, who after his death married Judge John Cleves Symmes. The following is the inscription upon his tombstone in the Lamington Cemetery, "Here lies the Body of the Rev.

Caleb Halsey, then of Hunterdon Co. July 10, 1808, makes deed for land including what has ever since been called "Halsey's Island" in Lake Hopatcong and which was willed to him by his father; to Priscilla Lambert.

11855.—Luther Halsey, b. at Morristown, N. J., May 10, 1758; entered Princeton College and Clio Hall in 1775. lishment and 9 Nov., 1777, Lieut. and Adjutant 2 Regt. He served until the close of the Rev. He was one of the original members of the Society of the Cincinnati. In 1789 the Academy at Elizabeth was opened and he took charge of its English department. He was afterwards settled at Newburg and at Schenectady. "He was principal of the Academy at Schenectady out of which grew Union College in 1795. As soon as he came there he established a prayer meeting and took a decided stand for religion. He offended many by opposing the practice of having liquor at funerals. He was prosecuted for riot in preventing the carting of wheat, &c. to market on Sundays." He died in 1829 at Cincinnati while on a visit. In the New York Observer of March 20, 1830, is the following notice of his death:— "At Cincinnati, Ohio, Luther Halsey, a Revolutionary officer and native of New Jersey. At the close of the war he exchanged his sword for the Bible, and has since been an active promoter of the Redeemer's Kingdom, by a holy life and unwearied Exertion in circulating Tracts and the Holy Scriptures. Dr. Luther F. Halsey says that Luther Halsey was married three times. His wives were sisters by the name of Foster. By the first wife he had two children, by the second none, and by the third thirteen children. The third wife is said to have been Abigail.

LUTHER HALSEY.

11856.—Abigail Halsey, married Aaron Lindsley. From the grandson (Charles Henry Lindsley) we learn that he inherited, as eldest son, a large landed property at Morris Plains, N. J. (On the records at Perth Amboy it appears that in 1748 and 1749 two tracts, one of 668 37-100 acres and another of 277 30-100 acres were located by Daniel Lindsley and Joseph Coe, Jr., on both sides of the Whippany River and on both sides the Rocksiticus road, which were possibly these lands); that he served in the Revolutionary war and in repelling a marauding party he was struck on the head by a sword in the hands of a dragoon whom he ran through the body; that he removed to Schooley's Mountain until after the war; that he sold his lands for Continental money and so became poor; that he removed first to Williamsburg, Long Island, and soon after to a tract of land about ten miles west of Ballston Spa, N. Y.; that here he and his two sons, Aaron and Luther, erected a saw and grist mill, store and other buildings; that the place came to be known as Lindsley's Mills and afterwards Milton. Here both Aaron and Abigail Lindsley died in extreme old age (over ninety) and were buried.

Gov. William Sanford Pennington, who was a cousin of Mrs. Lindsley and an officer of Artillery in the Rev. Army, speaks in his diary under date of October 14, 1780. "Yesterday afternoon I visited Mr. Linsley's Family at Harrins (?) Planes when I rec'd the Disagreeable information of the Death of my cousin the Rev. Dr. Halsey. The loss of a man of his well known character for Learning Virtue and Piety must be sensibly felt by all his relatives and acquaintances but it will undoubtedly inspire the most Heartfelt sensation of sorrow in the heart of his youngest sister to whom he acted as a parent and Brother. After sympathizing with Miss Sally Halsey on the loss of her brother & consoling her as much as was in my power I returned this morning to camp," (near Totoway, now Paterson.)

11857.—Sarah, m. Alexander Bate of N. Y. They removed to Schenectady on account of Mr. Bate's health and Come ye who know to venerate the just;

Come drop a tear upon this mouldering dust,

And while his spirit soars above the sky,
Let his example teach to live and die.

Farewell, dear friend, till the loud trump shall sound,
And wake the precious dust we here surround;
Then raised to bliss with thee we hope to sing
The wondrous love of our Eternal King.

He studied medicine at Elizabethtown, N. J., returning to Southampton in 1764, where he practiced his profession until 1776 when he was obliged to leave as he had made himself very obnoxious to the British as an open rebel. Soon after the Battle of Long Island he went to Killingworth, Connecticut, where he lived three years. In 1778 his wife died leaving him with four children. In 1779 he returned to Long Island. In 1787 he was by Governor Clinton appointed Sheriff of Suffolk County. In May, 1793, he removed to Ovid, N. Y. In 1794 Onondaga County was formed out of Herkimer County. In 1794 and succeeding years he filled the office of Supervisor and member of Assembly. In 1801 he was a delegate to revise the Constitution of the State. In 1804 he was appointed Clerk of Seneca Co. In 1804 was elected to the Eleventh Congress. In 1807 was elected State Senator. He died Nov. 19, 1832, aged 89.

In an obituary of his daughter Frances Halsey Barto, it was stated that he, in 1792, visited Lodi Landing, Seneca County, N. Y., taking with him his slave Prime to clear up a place and put up a log cabin. In the spring of 1793 he started from Southampton, L. I. with his family of eighteen persons. Going by water they ascended the Hudson River to Albany, making a portage from Albany to Schenectady. At that place they took Batteaux up the Mohawk River to Rome; transporting the Batteaux on wheels they went to Woods Creek where launching their Batteaux they went down the Creek to Oneida Lake and through Oneida Lake and through the Oneida and Seneca Rivers to Seneca Lake at Lodi Landing; there were at least six carrying places or the journey, at Albany, Little Falls, Rome, Jack's Rift, Seneca Falls and Skoyase. Mrs. Barto made her first visit to her friends on Long Island, accompanying her sister, Mrs. DeMott, on horseback, the track through the woods being simply a trail marked by blazed trees.

The following from a newspaper article will be read with interest:—

"The minister who gave them in Christ's name the memorials of his body and blood, was the one who under a license to preach the gospel from the Presbytery of Long Island had visited them, and received a call to be their first pastor two years previous, the Rev. Frederick Halsey. He was then a man of thirty-six years of age, having been born in Southampton, L. I., in 1761, where probably he was prepared for Columbia College, of which he was a graduate. It was as we suppose, while he was a student in that institution, that he witnessed the inauguration of General Washington as first President, in New York, in 1789. After his invitation to settle in Plattsburgh, he returned to his old home to be ordained, and then joining the Presbytery of Albany, was installed as Pastor in February 1796, by a commission from that body—Dr. Coe of Troy, and Messrs. Warford of Salem, and Williams of Cambridge, with their Elders.

"The period of his pastorate of fourteen years—from 1796 to 1810—has been characterized as 'one of the stormiest our world ever beheld, when the blasphemous sentiments of the French Revolutionists threatened the overthrow of religion in Europe, and poisoned the minds and corrupted the morals of thousands, even in this northern wilderness of the new world.' (Dobie's Discourse.) Through such a time Mr. Halsey fulfilled his ministry with decision and prudence, abiding in the truth and faithfully applying it; the membership of his church increasing to eighty-five. 'He was eminent as a friend of youth; as a peace-maker, and as a reprover of immorality; his reproof being characterized by such suavity of tone and manner, that it seldom failed to take effect.' An interesting memorandum has been published—(Plattsburgh Republican)—his 'Book of Accounts,' in which were the items of payment towards his salary of one hundred pounds per annum, (the pound in York Currency worth $2.50) and these include not alone cash, but various commodities—corn, wheat, hens, pigeons, salt, appletrees, 'the making of a gown,' by William Coe's wife. The total amount gives a yearly average of a little over £74, instead of the promised one hundred; and there still remain in the hands of his son as interesting relics unpaid notes of many hundreds of dollars. At the close of his pastorate, Mr. Halsey retired to a farm upon the outskirts of the village, and besides cultivating it, taught school both in the academy and at his home and supplied the pulpits of neighboring churches. After twenty-seven years, he died, August 8th, 1838, and was buried in our cemetery, with 'this rare eulogism,' as has been said, 'that he was a man who never made an enemy.'"

Matthew Halsey was a native of Bridgehampton, and his wife was from Newark. During the Revolution he served as a private in the battle of Long Island under Gen. Israel Putnam, for whom he always displayed unbounded admiration. While living on Long Island, he took out letters of marque and made a private expedition to New London against some Hessian troops of whom he captured thirteen. For this exploit he received from the Continental Congress a large quantity of currency, then very much depreciated in value. During the winter when Washington was at Valley Forge, he went to Newark by skating across the frozen New York Bay, the Kill von Kull and Newark Bay, that winter being an exceptionally severe one. After the war, in about the year 1795, he removed to the head of Otsego Lake and settled in the town of Springfield. Many years later he went to Steuben County. There at Bennett's Flats, when more than 90 years of age, he died, and under his head in the coffin, to serve as a pillow, was placed his well preserved collection of Continental currency. He was a man of imposing stature and great physical vigor, a stranger to fear and by nature implacable. He had inherited his full share of the indomitable spirit of his ancestor, Thomas Halsey. F. W. H.

The house at Bridgehampton in which 11811 Matthew Halsey lived and raised his family, is now occupied by Erskine Halsey of the 8th Generation and his family, and has been occupied by six generations of the name. It was moved to its present site from a hollow a little farther south, through which the water flows freely, and while it was in the hollow the water was kept from it by a dam. The picture given is from a photograph recently taken.

Y., in 1789, when the country was an unbroken wilderness. He d. 11 May, 1825. She d. 21 June, 1857. Judge L. held the first term of Court at Bath in 1796.

"Eunice Halsey Lindsley was the daughter of Jeremiah and Elizabeth Halsey of Bridge Hampton, Long Island, and was born April 2d, 1769. She was married in 1787, and removed to Morristown, N. J., the residence of her husband. In 1790, her husband's father, Col. Eleazer Lindsley, having purchased what was then township No. 1, in the town of Painted Post, N. Y., removed thither, with his family. The country was then new—an unbroken wilderness—except here and there a spot which had been cultivated by the Indians, one rudely constructed building serving for a time as the common abode of the colony. If we imagine the roof of a house set upon the ground, we have an idea of that building. Log houses were soon constructed, and each branch of the family had their separate dwelling. The nearest mill was at Tioga Point, 50 miles distant. Flour was, therefore, a luxury; but the deficiency was made up by pounding grain in a mortar. Many were the difficulties to be encountered in this early settlement. But Col. L. was the man to endure and overcome them. He had been an officer of the "Jersey Blues" in the Revolutionary War, and had seen hardships before. He was a man of energy and was soon surrounded by many of the comforts of life. He and his wife were members of the Presbyterian Church of Morristown, and at their new home did not forget that the vows of God were upon them. There was no living preacher; but Col. Lindsley held meetings at his own house at which sermons were read. A knoll, about three-quarters of a mile from the Pennsylvania line, was selected by him as a site for a church. The ground was leveled preparatory to building, but the house of God was not built. Its projector rested from his labors. His mortal remains lie in the family burying ground adjacent to the site selected by him for the sanctuary.

The subject of this notice had her part in the toils and privations of a new settlement. She had a strong constitution and untiring energy. Her husband was a prominent citizen of Steuben County. His house was a place of frequent resort, and his wife did her part to make it a place, which once visited, would be likely to be visited again. Many spoke of Judge Lindsley's house, as the home of hospitality. There, too, ministers of the Gospel who now and then visited this new and destitute region, found a cordial welcome. The late Dr. Perrine was one of those who there found a temporary home, when in his early ministry he came as a missionary to this region. But few of the friends who knew her in the vigor of life, are here to speak of her now. Most of them had gone before her to the eternal world. Few of those now living are aware of what she once was. They knew her only as one who for years has mingled but little with the world. Judge Lindsley died in 1825, having a short time before removed to Lawrenceville, about half a mile distant from his residence in Lindsleytown, N. Y. Thirty-two years had the deceased lived a widow. All her children (3 daughters) had died before her. She united with the Presbyterian Church at Lawrenceville at the time of its organization. For years she had been gradually failing in strength, and for some months it was evident that her earthly pilgrimage was nearly ended. So it seemed to herself, and she often said that her work was nearly done. During the few days of her last sickness, she was resigned and cheerful. She was fully aware that the time of her departure had come, and expressed no wish that it should be delayed.

Of the torpedo enterprise at New London in the war of 1812 Miss Caulkins says:—"A schooner called the Eagle, owned in New York, was prepared as a kind of torpedo vessel and sent into the Sound to make an experiment upon the enemy." She explains that the Eagle was captured by the British, the crew taking to their boats. The British then attempted to tow her up, but she fell to leeward and they anchored her, after which she "exploded with prodigious force and was scattered into fragments," while "a second Lieutenant and ten men who were on board the schooner were killed and several men in the boats were badly wounded." Miss Caulkins adds that this torpedo boat was entirely a private undertaking, the government having nothing to do with it. The Eagle was provided with a concealed mechanical arrangement by which she could be made to explode at a specified time. In her hold, under the appearance of ballast, she carried four hundred pounds of powder and other combustibles, with ponderous stones and destructive implements. When she exploded a British ship near by barely escaped destruction. Miss Caulkins does not give the names of those who were on board the Eagle.

118551.—Abigail Foster, b. Nov. 5, 1780; d. Feb. 23, 1872; married Rev. Isaac Van Doren. The following obituary notice of her husband contains much of her life:—

Rev. Isaac Van Doren died at Perth Amboy, N. J., Aug. 12th, 1864, in his 92nd year. He was born in 1772, graduated at the College of Princeton, and was a classmate of Bishop Hobart. Dr. Nott is the only living minister whom he knew when he was licensed, who survives him. Studied Divinity with Dr. Romaine of Schenectady and finished with Dr. Livingstone. Was licensed in New York City by the Collegiate Dutch Church. Married Abigail Halsey, eldest sister of Drs. Luther, Abram and Job F. Halsey. Settled in Hopewell, Orange Co., N. Y., in 1800, where during his pastorate of 23 years he was blessed with three distinct outpourings of the Holy Spirit. In one of them some 150 were added to his church. He removed to Newark, N. J., and for four years was Principal of the Academy. He then with his eldest son established the Collegiate Institute on Brooklyn Heights. From there he removed to Lexington, Ky. After spending several years as a teacher in the West, and while so engaged he had some 1500 under his tuition, he was eminently blessed with special blessings upon his pupils; on one occasion, 30 were added to the church of the late Dr. Carrell of the First Presbyterian, and the Episcopal Church of which the present Bishop McIlvaine was pastor.

His last years were usefully and happily spent residing with his children. For 64 years he lived a model of conjugal fidelity, affection and respect with the wife of his youth, whom he has left a widow to mourn his death. Mr. Van Doren left, beside his aged widow, 9 children, 32 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren—52 living descendants.

He was eminently social and given to hospitality, the gifted counsellor of young clergymen, and of all who applied to him for advice.

118553.—Luther, "child of Luther and Sarah"; died 8th Sept., 1787, in 2d year. (See Inscriptions on Tombstones at Elizabeth, No. 306, 307.)

Children of 11855 Luther Halsey and Abigail Foster.

He received a careful and liberal education. When he was still young, his father removed to Whitesboro, Oneida Co., New York. A few years later his father took charge of the Academy at Newburgh, N. Y. Luther, Jr., graduated from Union College in 1812, and became his father's assistant. Before 1816 he studied Medicine and Law in New York City, and Theology under Rev. John Johnston, D.D., of Newburgh. May 1, 1814, he united with the Pres. Church at Newburgh. In 1816 began to preach. Supplied the Presbyterian Church at Blooming Grove, Orange Co., N. Y., where he was ordained Aug. 7. Jan. 1, 1818, married a young widow, Mrs. Anna G. Smith, (formerly Miss Anna Gardiner of Newburgh.) The same year he was installed Pastor of the church at Blooming Grove. His ministry became to an extraordinary degree, useful; he soon became known for his talents and learning. He ruptured a blood vessel and was compelled to retire from the pulpit. In 1824 he was called to the chair of Chemistry and Natural History in Nassau Hall, Princeton, N. J. He fulfilled the duties of this position until 1829, when the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church elected him Professor of Ecclesiastical History and Church Polity in the Western Theological Seminary at Allegheny, Penn. Professor Halsey removed in 1837 to Auburn, N. Y., to perform in the Theological Seminary there, the duties of a similar office. In July, 1843, he was called to the Second Presbyterian Church of Allegheny. In 1846 he removed on account of his wife's health to Perth Amboy, N. J. In 1848 he delivered a course of lectures at Union

Theological Seminary in New York. He removed from New York in 1851 to Washingtonville, Orange Co., N. Y., where he preached as stated supply for many years. For the last ten years of his life his home was at Hammonton, N. J. Mrs. Halsey died at Pittsburg, Pa., 22d February, 1874. She was a remarkable woman. She read six languages besides her own. For more than fifty-six years she was the devoted wife of Dr. Halsey. Dr. Halsey retired to his farm near Hammonton, where he lived with his nephew, Mr. Abram H. Van Doren. He died in Norristown, Pa., whither he had gone to attend the burial of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Job F. Halsey, on the 29th of October, 1880, in the 87th year of his age. He was a man of great learning. When John Quincy Adams died, scholars agreed that America had lost her most learned citizen, and they agreed that then Dr. Luther Halsey was the most learned man known in the United States. Rev. Dr. Page of the Episcopal Church, said of him, "He is the best read man I have met for twenty years." Dr. M. W. Jacobus said, "He is so full of learning you have only to tap him on any subject, and the stream will flow." Dr. Halsey had a wide and thorough acquaintance with the science of chemistry. His knowledge of ecclesiastical history and of the history of America was unsurpassed. In the pulpit, Dr. Halsey was orthodox, instructive and eloquent. "Wendell Philips was not more eloquent than Dr. Halsey sometimes was in extemporaneous efforts." He was sought by many of the strongest churches in the land. He was unequalled in a prayer meeting talk. His religious character was sincere and exalted. Socially he was one of the most agreeable and delightful of men. His conversation was wonderfully interesting, brilliant and profitable. Washington College conferred the degree of D.D. upon him in 1831, and that of LL.D. in 1871. He had no children. His portrait hangs in the main hall of North College at Princeton.—[From sketch by Rev. G. G. Smith, of Santa Fe, N. Mexico. Parkes Historical Gleanings.]

118556.—Abraham Oothout, Rev., D.D., b. Nov. 11, 1798, at Whitesboro; grad. at Union College, 1822; d. Aug. 1868, at Richboa, Pa.; married, 1st, Elizabeth Vanarsdale, who was b. Jan. 29, 1794, d. Nov., 1848; she was a noble, good woman, and of inestimable help to him. Married, 2d, Harriet A. Adair, b. at Chambersburg, and d. in 1866 at Churchville, Pa.

He studied divinity at Princeton; founded and established a church (Presbyterian) on Vine street, Philadelphia, near 12th street, which charge he resigned after 2 or 3 years' pastorate, and accepted a call to the Dutch Reformed Church of North and Southampton, located at Churchville, Bucks Co., Pa., where he remained its Pastor 49 years. He resigned on account of ill health in 1866, and lived with his son, Luther F. Halsey, M. D., about one year, and died August, 1867. While Pastor of the Dutch Church at Churchville, Pa., he took into his family many boys and fitted them for College, among whom was Elisha K. Kane, the Arctic explorer. He was a profound theologian. Was called to several prominent churches in New York City and Brooklyn, but declined. Being of a very modest, retiring disposition, he preferred rural country life. He was endowed with great strength. At one time a man called on him and was insulting in his manner and language, whereupon Mr. Halsey picked him up bodily and held him over a large rain cask, and told him unless he took back what he had said and apologized, he would souse him into it head and heels.

118557.—Rev. Job Foster Halsey, D.D., was born in Schenectady, N. Y., July 12, 1800, and graduated from Union College in 1819. He studied theology with his brother, Rev. Dr. Luther Halsey; was licensed by Hudson River Presbytery in 1820. He spent three years in the Theological Seminary at Princeton, N. J., (1823-1826). He was ordained and installed Pastor of Tennent Church at Freehold, by the Presbytery of New Brunswick, June

1, 1826. He married Miss Elizabeth Parker Brinley. After two years' pastorate he became an agent of the American Bible Society. He began the work of supplying those destitute of it in the United States with the Bible. He removed to Albany, N. Y., and served as agent over sixteen counties of that State for the Sunday School, Tract and American Bible Societies. On the failure of his health he removed to Pittsburg. For a time he supplied the 1st Presbyterian Church of Allegheny, and in 1831 he was called to be its Pastor. In 1835 he accepted a Professorship in Marion Manual Labor College, Missouri. He lost his voice and removed to Perth Amboy, N. J., where he opened the Raritan Seminary for young ladies. Here he spent twelve years in teaching. In 1848 he recovered his voice and was able to preach again. He became pastor of the church in West Bloomfield, now Montclair, N. J., until compelled to leave on account of loss of the health of his wife. In 1856 he became Pastor of the First Pres. Church at Norristown, Pa., of which he was pastor until July 12, 1880, and from that date until his death "Pastor emeritus." He died March 24, 1882, and was buried beside his wife at Perth Amboy, N. J. His wife was born Feb'y 18, 1796, and died in 1880.

In a sketch of his life printed at the time of his death, the N. Y. Observer said of him:—"Dr. Halsey was a noble man, earnest and devoted to his work as a Christian minister and pastor. His bearing was grave and dignified, and he won the affections of his people by his tender, affectionate, and conscientious devotion to their spiritual interests."

Columbia College; was commissioned Captain in war of 1812; admitted to the bar and appointed Judge of Erie County, N. Y.; was Indian Agent for the six nations; Editor of the American Register, and was accounted "a jurist of superior reputation." He died June 3, 1864. They lived for about ten years at Sharon, "in the brick house next south of Kirby's Inn." This is nearly west of the clock tower. They are buried in the Sharon burying ground.

11859.—Sarah, b. Jan. 21, 1804, at Schenectady, N. Y.; d. Feb'y 21, 1894; m. Nathan Baker of Springfield, O., April 15, 1824.

In her early years, her father removed to Newburgh, N. Y., and while living there, she recalled the launching of the first steamboat on the Hudson river. Her father's home was the centre of an old-time culture and hospitality and there often gathered many old army comrades. She was always pleased to review her school days, when she went to the old stone house, formerly used as Washington's headquarters at Newburgh to recite her French lessons in the historic room with seven doors and one window. When quite young, she married Nathan Baker, and with her first-born, they left her old home on the beautiful Hudson, for their far western home in Cincinnati, Ohio. Travelling in their carriage with other friends westward bound, among whom was the Rev. Dr. John A. McClung, a warm friend and one of the great lights in the Presbyterian Church, they reached their journey's end after twenty-one days of travel.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Baker in Cincinnati, where they resided for many years, was always a centre of Christian culture and hospitality, and the "prophet's chamber" was ever held in readiness for the comfort and repose of any of the servants of the Heavenly King, irrespective of denominational preferences. The last years of her life were spent at the home of her son Dr. John E. Baker in Wyoming, Ohio. Mrs. Baker was a woman of unusual strength of mind and being a close observer of men and things and having a remarkable memory for past events, it was a rare delight to listen to her reminiscences of the olden time.—[N. Y. Observer.]

Children of 11.12.26 Elihu Halsey and Elizabeth Ely.

11.12.261.—Dr. Abraham Halsey was born at Hanover, N. J., Feb'y 19, 1764, and at death of his father, Elihu Halsey, in 1770, inherited a small farm which his father bought of John Youngs, but this by the will of his grandfather, Recompense Halsey, made the next year, he was to surrender to his brother Isaac and receive in place of it forty-six acres from him. He received as good an education as the country afforded, and in the later years of the Revolutiony War, though but sixteen years of age, served in the militia and was probably at Springfield battle in June, 1780. The war over he studied medicine with Dr. John Darcy, who had been "surgeon's mate" in Spencer's regiment, and was a near neighbor. Having obtained his profession, he disposed of his patrimony in New Jersey and took up his residence at first in Oswego, a Quaker settlement in the northern part of Fishkill, Dutchess County, New York, but soon after he purchased a house and five acres of land at Hopewell, an excellent country, and occupied by substantial farmers of wealth and education who to the extent of about eight miles in every direction from his location, employed and encouraged him. Here he continued to live the remainder of his life, adding in a few years 190 acres to his land by purchase of one Reuben Fowler, and in 1806 building a larger and more commodious dwelling on the opposite corner from his former one. Having become established in his practice he married October 20, 1791, Nancy, daughter of Captain Enoch and Susan Day Beach, sister of Samuel Beach of Nassau Hall and Charleston, who was born July 19, 1767. Mrs. Halsey died Oct. 10, 1805, of a fit of apoplexy, induced by excessive fatigue in caring for the family of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Robinson, who had just before died leaving a number of young children. Mrs. Halsey was a remarkably lovely character. Eminently pious and benevolent, her death was mourned by all. The poor blessed her and long was her memory cherished by all who knew her. Modest and unpretending in her charities, tender and kind in her sympathies, she was ever ready to soothe the sorrows of the afflicted and to cast a covering over the weaknesses of the imprudent and improvident. Dr. Halsey being left with a family of young children married May 1, 1806, Lucretia Green, daughter of Benjamin Green, and niece of Dr. Jacob Green of Hanover, N. J. She was a friend of his first wife and though "a religious woman of good mind and industry," in other respects she was a strong contrast to the first Mrs. Halsey. She was born June 6, 1763, and died Sept. 25, 1822. She had no children.

The character of Dr. Halsey was marked by traits of the most estimable kind. He was the ready patron of every enterprise for improving the condition of society around him. He very early got up a circulating library and for twenty years kept it up by constant attention and frequent subscription. He gave to two of his three sons a collegiate education and would have given the same to the youngest had he at the time been disposed to accept it. He was very hospitable and entertained not only his friends and acquaintances, but as he lived in the path of the first emigration from New England westward, he often had large families resting themselves at his place and talking over their prospects and expectations as well as their past history. He was the ever ready patron of every young man who showed a disposition to rise above his surroundings and many such had reason to thank him for his disinterested and substantial encouragement and aid. He was firm in his political opinions but never a candidate for political honors. He was man of strict integrity and observant of all the laws of propriety of conduct, especially careful to keep the Sabbath and to require its observance in his family. He had many warm friends and no enemies. In personal appearance he was tall and well proportioned and very affable and easy in his manner. He died May 7, 1822, of inflammation of the lungs, and was buried by the side of the Dutch Reformed Church at Hopewell, which he attended in his life time.

11.12.262.—Isaac Halsey, b. Aug. 31, 1765; married April 21, 1787, Mary Clark, and d. Jan. 22, 1844; she d. Dec. 21, 1823. The following account of him was written by his nephew, Samuel B. Halsey:—

Isaac Halsey, son of Elihu Halsey, was b. in 1765, Aug. 31st, and died at his son Isaac's in East Newark, and was buried in Hanover.

Left an orphan at the age of 4 years, he went to live with his grandfather Ely in Livingston, near Hanover; he was about eleven years old when the war of the Revolution commenced. About that time or soon after he was bound an apprentice to the blacksmithing business by his grandfather, but being dissatisfied with the trade he soon after ran away from his master, and not daring to go home he wandered off and found himself at Ramapo in a very destitute condition on the third day after setting out. There he went to work to get means to carry him further away and but little is known of his whereabouts until he was captured by the Indians and detained a prisoner at Wyoming. Escaping from them finally, he worked his way barefooted back to Hanover in the winter time, and being recognized in passing by his Uncle Burnet, who lived in Hanover, was taken in and cared for until he recovered from his lameness. He soon after found employment in the army as a wagon boy and aided in that capacity in removing the troops and stores from Boston to New York. He continued in this and similar employments to near the close of the war, when he was received as a substitute for a sick soldier at West Point (a man named Burt, see Condit papers, in Hist. Soc. N. J.) and received from that soldier in return for his substitution his claims on the government for bounty land and pay. The war soon after closed and he found himself at liberty again with all his fortune in his certificates as a soldier. Casting about for a new business, he met with an offer of an old horse and cart for his papers and made the exchange; with this equipment he commenced the business of a carman in the City of New York, and by his honest, persevering and patient industry soon met with favor and encouragement from the merchants in the lower part of the city. His first and principal benefactor and employer was Isaac Clason, then one of the heaviest dealers and shippers. Although he found time to work for others more or less, he attached himself particulary to Mr. Clason and had his entire confidence and the whole control of his carting during his long and prosperous commercial life, and when in the course of events, by the extension and growth of the city, Mr. Clason, Col. Willett and other wealthy gentlemen owning property along the East River, at or near Corlear's Hook, found it to their advantage to improve it by leveling the hills and filling up the marshy ground, they gave him jobs of that kind, paying him in lots as they were filled and graded. By this time he had by prudent economy so thrived that he had many men working under him and a large force of horses and carts enabling him to work for the Corporation in grading the City, or rather the extensive commons at Corlear's Hook, which were to be covered by the City in its progress up town. He worked also for the General Government in hauling materials for the forts and defenses at Governor's Island and elsewhere. In this way and by constantly investing his earnings in the purchase and improvements of lots, building cheap, comfortable houses on them as he could to make them productive, he accumulated while rearing a large family in a plain, respectable manner, a fortune worth more than a hundred thousand dollars and lived to a good old age, greatly respected by all his acquaintances. He was kind to the poor and never was charged with oppression by any. Strictly attentive to his own business he never meddled with that of others. Ever ready to do an act of kindness, he always remembered generously his old friends and employees, distinguishing with judgment between the industrious and idle, the sober and improvident. His advice was much sought after by business men embarked in real estate speculations in the city and modestly given. At his death he owned about thirty houses and lots in New York to be divided among his children, unencumbered, having advanced to each of them in his life time a reasonable outfit as they respectively arrived at age, He was a strictly honest man and though firm in his political opinions no brawler in party matters. Once he held the office of Alderman of his ward, but not by his own desire, and although often requested to run for office in other instances, declined the honors offered. S. B. H.

11.12.263.—Jacob Halsey, b. July 8, 1767; d. Sep. 26, 1821; married 1st, Jemima Cook, dau. of John Cook. She had one brother and two sisters, viz: David Cook (who married a Baldwin and lived in Newark); Ann (who m. Peter Sloat), and Mary (who m. Jacob, son of Benj. Green, and nephew of Rev. Jacob Green,) and was a niece of Mrs. Pruden Alling. She d. Nov., 1800, at New York, and was buried at Brick Church cemetery, afterwards moved to 2d Ave. Jacob Halsey married 2d, April, 1802, Mrs. Ann McLean, dau. of Hugh and Marion McLeod Mackenzie, and widow of John McLean, who had one dau., Marion, who m. her step-brother, John C. Halsey. Mrs. Halsey was a sister of Mrs. John Slidell, Mrs. Thos. Bolton, John Mackenzie, Ronald Mackenzie, Alexander Mackenzie and Mary Mackenzie (Mrs. Wm. Buchanan). Mrs. Halsey d. May 12, 1834, aged 60 years, and is buried in the Marble Cemetery.

The following was written by his nephew, the late Samuel B. Halsey:—

Jacob Halsey, 3d son of Elihu Halsey, was a carpenter who followed his trade and lived and died in the City of New York. He was a man of great energy in business, of active usefulness in the church, and in every thing that related to good society. He became an extensive master builder and dealt largely in lumber, acquired a considerable fortune, but in the troublesome times of 1812 to 1816 in an attempt to monopolize the lumber brought to the City, he failed and never afterwards accumulated much property, although by his indomitable perseverance and industry he made a very comfortable living for his family. He died from bursting a blood vessel from over exertion. He was a warm hearted, benevolent man, of sterling and tried integrity, and his loss was lamented by a large circle of attached friends. Originally a member and supporter of Rev. Gardner Spring's Church (the old Brick Church near the City Hall Park) he afterwards was a principal member in the Spring Street Church and a large contributor to its erection and support.

He had by a first marriage four sons and two daughters. The oldest son, John C. Halsey, in 1811, then a young man, joined a company of young gentlemen fitted out under the patronage of John Jacob Astor to go to the Northwest coast of America for a term of five years for the purpose of purchasing furs of the Indians and forming a fur trading establishment on the Columbia River. Early in the war of 1812 the British took the post and made prisoners of the traders sending them home by such routes as they preferred, some across the country and others by the way of China. John came home by way of China and brought with him a number of Chinese articles such as chop sticks, opium pipes, canes and cloth of a particular texture and coloring, &c. After his return he was set up in the fur business by Mr. Astor, a Mr. Seton, one of the returned traders, being his partner, but in a few years the firm was dissolved, and under Mr. Astor's patronage John again went into the fur business in his single capacity and was very successful. He afterwards took in a partner by the name of Ebbets and this firm became rich. Mr. Ebbets died and Stephen A. Halsey, brother of John, came into the concern in his place and continued the business after John's death.

years in the Revolutionary army, and moved to Ohio in 1812 and settled near Lebanon, Warren County, Ohio.

She was the daughter of Walter Smith, a Hollander, who owned a large tract of land at what is now Short Hills, his house standing near where that of Mr. Hartshorne does now. When she was sixteen years of age the British raided the neighborhood, and her father and brothers being in the army, she carried off her mother to a place of safety, but returning to see the battle she fell unexpectedly in range of the enemy's fire, the sound of whose musket balls whistling about her ears she used to describe to her descendants. When the British again came to Springfield in June, 1780, she was married, and her husband was in the patriot army. With an infant in her arms, she again took her family to a place of safety, with a mirror which is still preserved and in the possession of Miss Cornelia U. Halsey.

Isaac Halsey was not of age when the war broke out. He enlisted and served as a private for one year, was quartered near Canada. (From Dep. Interior, Bureau of Pensions, May 28, 1889. Statements made in 1836-7 by his widow, Sarah.) He enlisted in the winter of 1776 for one year under Capt. Sam'l Potter, in the 3d Batt. commanded by Col. Elias Dayton, and marched to the frontier of Canada. On his return he joined a militia company under Capt. Brookfield to be on "call" in emergencies and to serve alternate months on guard on the lines patroling &c., to prevent the enemy's foraging parties from plundering and molesting the inhabitants. He was in the battle at Connecticut Farms June 6, 1780, and in the expedition of Lord Sterling who crossed on the ice to Staten Island (this was the midnight march in Jan., 1780, when 1500 troops crossed over on the ice through three feet of snow to capture a fort in which they were unsuccessful). In 1780 he joined a militia company of cavalry or light horse and continued in it to close of war. He led his company at the Battle of Springfield June 23, 1780.

Ichabod B. Halsey was an early settler and prominent citizen of the township. He was the son of Maj. Daniel Halsey of New Jersey and received from his father a section of land on condition that he would settle upon it and improve it. The section was No. 31, north of Lebanon, and contained over eight hundred acres all good land. Mr. Halsey became one of the wealthiest and most prosperous citizens of the township, but about 1822 he lost all his property by becoming surety for his friends. His splendid farm and his chattels were sold to pay the debts of the business firm for which he had become surety, and he and his family were turned out of their comfortable home. Much sympathy was expressed for the unfortunate pioneer, but the sympathy of Judge Francis Dunlevy took a practical turn. The Judge invited Mr. Halsey and his family to make their home on his farm which was gladly accepted. Twenty acres were assigned them at one corner of the farm, where a cabin was built and other improvements made with the aid of neighbors.

Here the unfortunate family had a rude but comfortable home for some years. Before the organization of Turtle Creek Township, Mr. Halsey's land was in Franklin Township. His name is found in the list of trustees of the latter township.

Richard C. Moore and Richard Henderson, Censors of the Incorporated Medical Society of Richmond Co., Staten Island. The certificate granted to her is signed by Benj. Parker, President, July 10, 1809. They continued to practice in Staten Island for several years and then removed with their slaves, of whom they had a number, to New York. It is said that they had the first "bought carpet" on the Island. An English gentleman had brought it with him to N. Y., and his wife dying soon after he sold this and his other furniture and returned to England. The following obituary notice is from a local newspaper:—

At three o'clock this afternoon the remains of another of our old citizens, General Cornelius Halsey, were conveyed to their last resting place, General Halsey died at his residence on Tuesday afternoon, at the advanced age of 83 years. He had maintained remarkable vigor and activity up to the time of his last illness.

The deceased was born in Plattsburgh, and was a son of the Rev. Frederick Halsey, who settled permanently in Plattsburgh in 1794, and who two years later, in October, 1796, was duly installed as pastor of the Presbyterian Church organized in Plattsburgh that year, and the first church of any denomination organized in Northern New York. The pioneer members numbered 18. He was pastor for fourteen years, when he retired to a farm on the outskirts of the village, and besides cultivating it, taught school at the Academy and at home. He was principal of the Academy in 1817.

The subject of this sketch has led a quiet but very industrious life, and in early times accumulated a large property. He was a heavy loser in the old Clinton County bank, which failed in about 1840. Perhaps his greatest business misfortune was in 1830, when the forge, coal houses, ashery, and other works belonging to Bailey & Halsey, and located at Morrisonville, were completely swept away by the great freshet of that year. It was at that time the most important iron works on the Saranac river above Plattsburgh.

For twenty-five years Mr. Halsey was prominently engaged in the mercantile business in Plattsburgh.

Almost continuously through his long life he has held some responsible official trust. He was Supervisor for Plattsburgh in 1836, 1840, 1844 and 1845. He represented Clinton County in the Legislature in 1837 and 1838. He was Justice of the Peace in Plattsburgh for a long term of years. For more than twenty years past, with but one year's interruption, he has been Secretary of the Saranac River Plank Road company. For a considerable number of years past his principal business has been that of a general insurance agent.

In politics General Halsey was always a strong and active Democrat.

Under the old militia organization of the State of New York subsequent to the war of 1812, General Halsey was appointed Brigadier General of Cavalry for this military district. When the Clinton County Military Association assembled in Plattsburgh in 1843 to arrange for the memorable anniversary of that year in honor of the Battle of Plattsburgh, General Halsey was selected as Marshal of the day.

In his church relations he was an Episcopalian, and was for many years Vestryman and Treasurer of Trinity Church, Plattsburgh.

He has also been a member of the Board of Trustees of Plattsburgh Academy for over forty years.

In 1840 General Halsey married Miss Laura Wadsworth, of Burlington, Vt., who survives him. He leaves two daughters and one son: Mrs. Laura Tilley, of St. Louis, Mo., Eulalia L. Halsey, who resides at home, and Dr. Frederick W. Halsey, who is practicing in Boston, Mass.

He was born in Blooming Grove, Orange Co., N. Y., Dec. 14th, 1806. He lost his hearing when about 6 years old; a severe gathering in the head destroyed the ear drum, but he always retained the power of speech. He was educated at the New York Institution for Deaf Mutes. He came with his family in 1825 to a farm five miles from Geneva on the east bank of Seneca Lake, which had been purchased by his grandfather in 1795. He married Julia Malvina Anderson, daughter of Dr. Alex. Anderson of New York, Nov. 17, 1835, and brought her to his farm. His mother, being a devoted Presbyterian, had brought him up in the strictest habits of that sect, but recognizing the necessity of a written service of "Common Prayer" for a deaf person to worship with the congregation, she sanctioned his confirmation in the Episcopal Church, and ever thereafter he was a devoted churchman, driving five miles every Sunday to Trinity Church, Geneva, where all his children were baptized and confirmed. He always observed the Lord's Day with scrupulous reverence, never allowing any planning of week day work, never reading secular papers or books, and always most devout in daily reading and prayer. And God granted to him the great privilege of having service in his own house for two years, and then having a dear little church built on his farm—"Grace Church, Willowdale." He was also instrumental in establishing several other missions. The record of his last days is best given by the Rev'd Maunsell Van Rensselaer of New York, who knew him well, and wrote as follows of him in the November '94 number of the "Church Eclectic":

"Then came the summons to the patriarch of Willowdale, and it found him ready at the end of a long and blameless life. He had ever shown the liveliest interest in the inception and progress of the Missions, urging and encouraging the occupation of new points. His exemplary and useful life had attracted a host of attached admirers and friends, whose sorrow and sympathy were displayed in every way on the report of his illness. Young and old, rich and poor, who had been the objects of his guileless friendship, vied in showing their respect and love by every act of kindness and self-sacrifice. As he failed gradually and imperceptibly hope was ever uppermost. This was encouraged by his patient and resolute spirit which always sustained him. His only trouble came from his inability to repeat the Lord's Prayer without prompting. Thus 'second childhood' came to him in its loveliest form, bringing him again in spirit to his mother's knee, and how she would have rejoiced if she could have foreseen that such would be the end. As often as the Blessed Sacrament was celebrated in the Church which he had helped to build, it was carried to him by the Priest through the waiting and reverent congregation and received by him with the humility and devotion which the grace of God had rooted in his heart and displayed in his looks and demeanor."

Anthony Post Halsey was born in Liberty street, New York, and was closely identified with the business interests of Old New York for fifty years. His official connection with the Bank of New York covered a half century, only ending with his death August 26, 1863. Mr. Halsey took an active part in establishing the public school system of the city, and for many years was personally engaged in the evening schools. Early Sabbath School work found in him an earnest helper, and he also held several active positions in the benevolent societies and institutions of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Halsey was a scholarly man, having from very early years an intelligent interest in the literature of the day, and his taste for solid reading was an abiding one. As a Christian his Biblical knowledge was thorough, the purity of his character testifying to his "delight in the law of the Lord."

The following is a brief sketch of his life:—

Abraham Halsey resided in the town of Southampton, at his birthplace, on the north side of Mecox Bay, near Water Mill Station and Post Office. His father dying when he was but eleven years of age, his mother an invalid, the cares of the head of a family were forced upon him, he being the eldest of the four children of Caleb Halsey. The farm encumbered with a heavy debt called out all the energies of the children in their struggles for existence and to keep the homestead from being sacrificed. These obstacles of a nature so great as to dishearten most boys were only an incentive to greater efforts for him. He found time to pursue his studies, and obtained an English education surpassed by few. At the age of nineteen he taught school, and although there are but few living who were his pupils, still it is remembered by them that he many times was seen after school hours prosecuting his work on the farm, plowing and harrowing late in the night. At the age of twenty-one he went upon a whaling voyage for one year, and after that time devoted his whole life to farming. He had no political aspirations and served in but few of the town offices at various periods of his middle life. Active in his business and given to much reading and research, he familiarized himself with almost every branch of knowledge and system of philosophy. As a conversationalist he was noted, and his judgment was of so much weight among the people of Eastern Long Island that he was called the "Sage of the Hamptons." Travelers visiting the Hamptons were directed to Captain Abraham Halsey's for all information relative to the town. In politics he was a Whig, and afterwards a Republican, always a vigorous opponent of slavery. To him Mr. Geo. Rogers Howell in the preparation of his "History of Southampton" was greatly indebted for many of the facts and incidents which enliven that work.

During the period of eighty-eight years and one month that he was spared to this earth, his was a life of most perfect health, and only once during that time did he require the services of a doctor.

During the period when Rev. Daniel Beers was Pastor of the Presbyterian Church, about 1833, Mr. Halsey was converted and until late years was a strict and regular attendant of the church. About that time (1833) when the first strong temperance movement made its power felt in Southampton, he was one of the leaders and a strong advocate of the cause. An incident of his strong moral as well as spiritual nature is remembered in the fact that he was the first captain or officer who dared to brave public opinion and refuse to "wet his commission." It was customary in those days to treat the men of the company when the officers received their commission, but his decided stand against the evil made him firm in his resolve to withstand even the popular custom of the time, and as a result it gained for him friends of the staunchest character.

Just two weeks before his demise he was stricken with what was thought to be a billious attack, but which in reality was a paralytic stroke, and on Tuesday morning, May 3d, at five o'clock, he entered the unseen world.

A kind son, a loving father, a respected neighbor, a man bearing upon his very countenance the evidence of truest manhood, God permitted him to remain among the inhabitants of the earth far beyond the allotted period of man's life.

James Halsey, an old-time merchant in this city, died at his home, No. 69 West Ninety-third st., on Thursday, from Bright's disease. He was born in Walesville, Oneida County, N. Y., seventy-four years ago. He came to this city in his youth, and was employed as a clerk. A few years later he went to Philadelphia and opened a store for the sale of cloth and tailor's trimmings. He remained in Philadelphia about twenty years, and then returned to this city and went into the woollen business, having stores at different times in Duane, Lispenard and other streets. On the outbreak of the war, being unable to collect his Southern accounts, he had to give up his own business and accept a position with Lesher, Whitman & Co. Mr. Halsey was prostrated by paralysis three years ago, and since then had been unable to leave his bed. Fifty-one years ago he married Miss Anna Gorman, a daughter of John Gorman, a banker in Washington. His widow, two unmarried daughters and a married son survive him.

Moore became Governor in 1860 he made Halsey his private secretary and he held the same position under Gov. Allen inside the Confederate lines. When Wietz became Governor in 1879 he called Halsey to the same position and Gov. McEnery retained him. For a year he was an editorial writer on the New Orleans "Picayune, Times, and State." He received a liberal education for those days, and having a taste for reading he added largely to the rudimentary schooling of his youth, which helped to make him a useful citizen in later life. He was naturally studious and fond of books, a close observer, and with a retentive memory.

While a young man he located at Newburgh, Orange County, New York, where he married, April 25, 1838, Miss Margaret Carlisle, daughter of the proprietor of the flour mills at Hyde Park, N. Y., and there he spent the remainder of his life.

Mr. Halsey was held in the highest esteem by the general public for his business qualities, strict integrity, and excellent moral and Christian character. He interested himself in the many phases of municipal life, especially in financial, commercial and industrial interests. His advice was often sought after, and his excellent far-seeing qualities were much valued by those who had to consult him. He was a Republican in politics and often urged by his friends to accept political preferment, but he declined to become a candidate or hold office of any kind. He served a few years as a member of Washington Engine Company, No. 4, of the Volunteer Fire Department. and was one of the founders of the Mechanics' Library Association, which was organized November 28th, 1838, and transferred its books to the Newburgh Free Library on April 1st, 1862.

He was engaged in the iron business for many years, having purchased an interest in the foundry of John W. Wells, on February 16th, 1839. He was a most competent and industrious member of the firm, and the business was conducted with much success. Having profited by his industry and application, and acquired a competency, he sold out to John H. Corwin on February 21st, 1850, and retired from active business life.

He became a Director in The Quassaick National Bank of Newburgh, and at the time of his death on March 17th, 1872, the Board of Directors caused the following minute to be entered in their books as expressive of their esteem :—"Chapman Halsey, by his quiet and gentlemanly manners, his strict adherence to sound business principles and habits, his undoubted uprightness and integrity in all his conduct, won the respect of the community in which he lived, and the warm friendship of his co-laborers in this Board."

He spent the last years of his life in quiet retirement at his home in Ketcham Place, at that time a very fashionable place of residence in the city. He was survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters.

Sketch written by himself at the age of ninety-two years:—

"At the age of fifteen entered the Sophomore Class at Williams' College; graduated 1811. In the Spring of 1812 entered a medical office in the city of Troy. After a few weeks' residence, the great "change of heart," returned home, united with the church, and in the Fall entered the Theological Seminary, Andover; graduated the Fall of 1815. The following Winter supplied the vacant pulpit in Southampton, L. I. In the Spring was ordained an evangelist in Bethlehem, Conn., and with a colleague was sent by the Connecticut Missionary Society on a mission of one year to Kentucky. Cold Winter of 1816 voice broke. In the Spring returned and spent the following Winter on mission to the church in North Stonington, Conn. In the Spring of 1818 was sent by Young Men's Missionary Society, New York, a missionery to Western N. Y. In the Winter of 1819 was installed over the church at Bergen, Genessee Co., N. Y. After tweve years' pastorate went to Niagara Co., in ministerial service till Spring of 1842, then retired to present residence."

From an obituary notice printed in the "Evangelist" of April 16, 1891, we take the following extracts :—

After preaching six months at Southampton, L. I., he was ordained by the Consociation of Litchfield, Connecticut, and sent as missionary to Kentucky. Riding over three thousand miles on horseback was one item in the experiences of this field.

In 1818, under a commission from the Young Men's Evangelical Society of New York City, he commenced labor as a missionary in western New York. After a few months of work here, principally at Bergen and Clarence, he accepted a call to become pastor of the Congregational church at Bergen, Genessee County, and was installed in January, 1819. For several years he preached also at Byron, where he organized the first church.

In the spring of 1820, he attended the meeting of the General Assembly in Philadelphia, making the entire journey to that place on horseback. On his return by way of his native place, he was married, June 15th, to Sophia, youngest daughter of Rev. Aaron Woolworth.

His ministry with the church at Bergen continued for twelve years, during which period there were two seasons of special religious interest, and the membership of the church increased from fifty to about one hunhred and fifty. In 1830 he removed to Niagara County, where he preached for five years in the Congregational church at Chalmers, and three years in the Presbyterian Church at Niagara Falls. His ministry in these places included a large share of pioneer work, in which he had the benefit derived from his early experience. In 1842, owing to the failure of his voice, he was obliged to relinquish permanently the labors of the active ministry, and he then removed to a farm in the town of Wilson. But a change of relation caused no change of spirit. He still took delight in meeting his brethren of the Presbytery of Niagara, and for forty-five added years, was rarely absent from their gatherings, where he was respected and beloved as a father among them. His counsel was often sought, while his modesty kept him in the background.

For more than three years before his death his sight, memory and power of motion were greatly impaired. While he keenly missed the gladness of the sunshine, the companionship of books and the pleasure of accustomed activity, he could stay his soul upon his covenant God. His early religious teaching lingered longest in his memory. Catechism, hymns and passages of Scripture were perfectly familiar, when the names of nearest friends were utterly forgotten.

He was kindly cared for by his children until he quietly entered into rest, March 23rd, 1891, and the funeral took place March 25. He was buried in Greenwood Cemetery, on the shore of Lake Ontario, by the side of his wife, who died in October, 1876. Dr. Halsey is survived by three sons, two daughters, many grandchildren and great-grandchildren. The sons are Dr. C. C. Halsey, a ruling elder in the Presbyterian church at Montrose, Pa., Professor C. S. Halsey, principal of the Union Classical Institute, Schenectady, N. Y., S. H. Halsey, a farmer at East Wilson, Mrs. Mary H. Bull of the same place, and Mrs. C. H. Fowler, whose home is with her brother in Schenectady. C. C. H.

1181133.—Gaius Halsey, was born at Bridge Hampton, May 4th, 1793, and in 1795 went with his father Matthew to Springfield, N. Y. He took up the study of medicine with Dr. Joseph White of Cherry Valley, a noted practitioner of that day whose reputation extended from Albany to Buffalo. In Bainbridge, Chenango County, he married Nov. 25, 1815, Mary Church, a granddaughter of Col. Timothy Church, one of the men of Vermont who shared in the victory of Bennington, and in 1817 he settled at Kortright, Delaware County, a village on the Catskill and Susquehanna turnpike. Here he spent the remainder of his days, and here, on December 18th, 1835, he died and was there buried. His wife, Mary Church, had died some years in advance of him. Above her grave he erected one of those old-time box-shaped monuments of brown stone and marble with paneled sides and ends, and in the inscription exhorted his children, when visiting the place, to "pledge their vows to heaven to honor her memory by imitating her virtues." A monument of similar design was afterwards placed above his own grave. Dr. Halsey's second wife, Barbara Grant, by whom he had no children, survived him until 1892, when she died at Hobart, Delaware County. Dr. Ferris Jacobs of Delhi, who knew him well in early life, has described Dr. Halsey in these words:—"His size was full, plump, imposing; his position as physician and gentleman honorable and influential; in mind quick and positive; his acts energetic and well sustained." When the Astor House in New York was completed, Dr. Halsey came to that city to purchase some surgical instruments and stopped at the new place of entertainment, then the wonder of the town, paying what for those times was a large bill. He afterwards many times aroused the interest and perhaps incredulity of his farmer patrons with the story of the big bill. Dr. Halsey died early but had achieved some of that distinction for which nature intended him. Kortright in those times was a thriving and populous settlement on one of the State's most frequently traveled highways. His reputation as a practitioner was wide and high and he had eminence generally as a citizen. In 1825, on July 4th, when the 50th anniversary of Independence was celebrated at Kortright, he delivered the address of the day. A time-worn newspaper print of it, with its praise of Washington and an allusion to "the beardless man of Roanoke," still has in it some of the breath of life. With a larger community for his home and a longer life, he must have made more than a local name. After railroads were built Kortright lost its eminence. On a sterile soil a few remaining dwellers now lead a lonely and stagnant life. Dr. Halsey's house still stands there and within the same enclosure rises the building which he erected as his office with upper rooms for students with dissecting conveniences. Some rods to the rear of both edifices, in a grove of trees planted by himself, is still seen an iron railing that marks the graves of himself, Mary Church and Barbara Grant. These are the sole remains of his family that now exist in Delaware County.

From the "Tribune" of Oct. 13, 1887:—

Mrs. Ann Halsey, better known as "Aunt Nancy," died on Tuesday at the Graham Home, in Washington ave., at the age of ninety-four. She was assaulted at her home in Bridge Hampton, L. I., a few years ago, by the negro Rugg, who was afterward hanged for the Maybee murder. Mrs. Halsey and her sister lived alone, and one Sunday night Rugg called at the house and demanded money. When refused he choked Mrs. Halsey, but was forced to let her go in order to escape from a man who appeared in response to her screams. Her mind was more or less affected after that and she was occasionally violently insane. She was in the home several years.

"He early manifested literary tastes and preferences, devoting much time to the improvement of his mind by reading, and often writing contributions for the local, and other newspapers. In early life the great revival of 1831, that swept over the land, took hold of him as "a mighty, rushing wind," and wrought a work of grace that transformed his nature. He united with the Presbyterian Church in 1831. In 1843 he was ordained an Elder. For a generation he was the faithful and efficient clerk of the session, whose records attest his fidelity and care. For over twenty-five years he was the honest and conscientious treasurer of the session, dispensing the charities of the church under the direction of her authority, and as far as possible obtaining that direction. His term as Elder lacks little of half a century. His term as Clerk covers something like thirty years, and as Treasurer over one quarter of a century. Full of years, full of grace, with a record of labor for the church, he has gone to his reward. The infirmities of age, the agony of lingering illness, the helplessness of debility, the pangs of dissolution are ended, and ended to return no more."

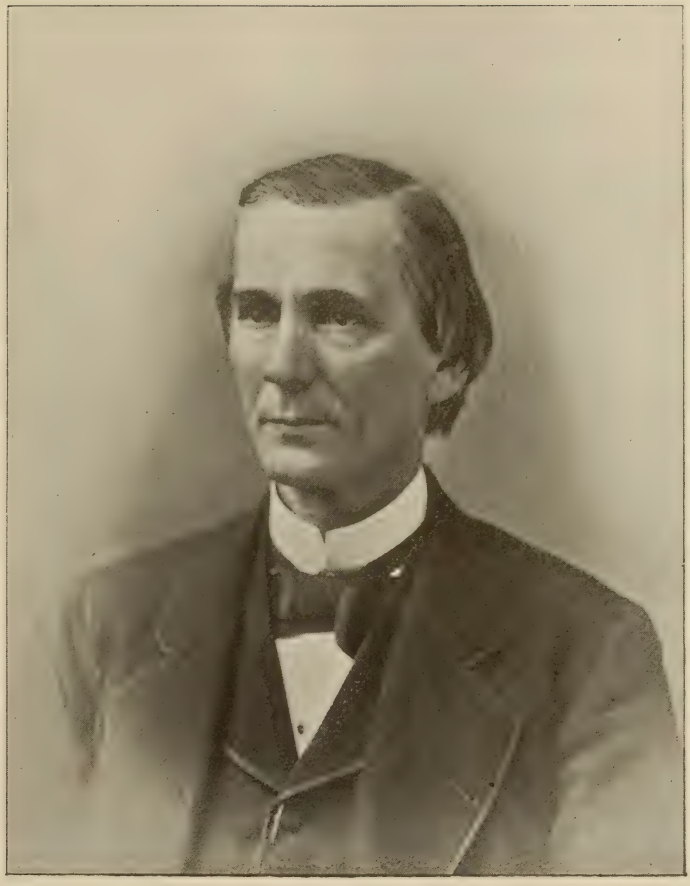
Hon. Jeremiah Halsey, LL.D., was born at Preston, Conn. He is a son of the late Jeremiah S. Halsey, a re-



Very Truly Yours,
J. Habberton

spected citizen of Preston, and through him is descended from Revolutionary stock, his grandfather, Colonel Jeremiah Halsey, also of Preston, a lawyer of great ability and extensive practice, having served with credit as an officer in the Continental army. The maiden name of his mother was Sally Brewster, and on her side he traces his ancestry to Elder William Brewster, who came over in the "Mayflower," and of whom he is a descendant in the seventh generation. In childhood his health was delicate and, in consequence, his early education was obtained under serious disadvantages. By a degree of perseverance, which, under the trying circumstances, entitles him to great credit, he obtained, nevertheless, an excellent education, although it cost him no inconsiderable suffering. A change of climate being ordered by the family physician he went to live at Hawkinsville, Georgia, and there studied law in the office of Messrs. Polhill and Whitfield. He was admitted to the bar by the superior court for the southern circuit of Georgia, at Hawkinsville, on April 23, 1845, and on December 11th, of the same year, having returned to the North, he was duly admitted to the bar of Windham County, Connecticut. His health being still in a precarious condition, he was obliged to devote further time to travel. In September, 1849, being somewhat improved in health, he opened law offices at Norwich, in partnership with the late Samuel C. Morgan. But his fellow citizens of Norwich insisted upon his serving them in the Legislature, and in 1852, being nominated on the Whig ticket, for the State House of Representatives, he was elected to that body by a vote which proved the respect entertained for him by the people irrespective of party. In 1853 he was re-elected to the House, and in that year also was appointed city attorney of Norwich. After holding the latter office some eighteen years, winning golden opinions by his skillful defense of the city's interests, he resigned it in order that he might have more time to devote to his duties as a member of the commission charged with the task of building the new State House at Hartford, upon which he had been appointed by Governor Ingersoll. These duties terminated with the completion of the structure named, in 1880. The principles of the Republican party met his warmest approval from the outset, and he joined this organization as soon as it enunciated its platform. In 1859 he was elected to the Legislature a third time and was re-elected in 1860. During the trying period of the Civil War he was ardent in his support of the federal authorities and did all that lay in his power to keep the State of Connecticut up to the highest requirements of patriotism. In April, 1863, Mr. Halsey was admitted to practice in the United States Circuit Court, and on February 24, 1870, he was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States. Two of the cases in which he made arguments, "Wright vs. the Norwich and New York Transportation Company," reported 13 Wallace, p. 104; and "The City of Norwich," 118 U. S., p. 468, settled the construction of the act of Congress limiting the liability of ship owners on the basis of the maritime law of Europe, giving full protection to the vast shipping interests of the country. Respected alike for his solid acquirements—general as well as professional—and his pure character, he stands with the foremost members of the legal profession of Connecticut, and is known and honored far beyond the boundaries of the State which has been the principal theatre of his forensic efforts. He is always abounding in common sense and his judgment as a manager of causes is almost infallible. His gifts flow out of a clean, honorable, truthful nature. Trinity College gave him the degree of LL. D. in 1882. A devout Christian, Mr. Halsey has been a regular attendant at Christ Church (Episcopal), Norwich, ever since taking up his residence in that city, and during most of the time has held the office of warden or vestryman. He is liberal in his donations for Christian purposes, missionary and charitable, and is a generous friend of the poor and needy who seek his counsel and assistance. Mr. Halsey was married on June 1, 1854, to Elizabeth Fairchild, the daughter of Andrew Fairchild of Redding, Conn. Mrs.

Halsey is a woman of great refinement and high culture, and her home is one of the most charming and hospitable in the State. (Biography of Connecticut, pg. 21, &c.)

Children of 118555 Rev. John Taylor Halsey and Margaret Oakley.

The following notice of Mr. Halsey was received too late for insertion on page 100, where it would more properly appear :—

He was born in Schenectady, New York, Feb. 8, 1797. He was the second son of Captain Luther Halsey, of the Continental Army, friend and aide-de-camp to George Washington, and one of the founders of the Society of Cincinnati. His mother was Abigail Foster, of Irvington, New Jersey. He was educated at Union College, Schenectady, graduating in 1816, which institution his father, Captain Luther Halsey, was largely instrumental in establishing. At the Seminary at Auburn, New York, he studied theology, and was ordained a minister of the Presbyterian Church.

In 1824 the Rev. John Taylor Halsey, in connection with his brother-in-law, Judge James Stryker, established a boarding-school for boys at Woodbridge, New Jersey, in a large mansion known until recent times as the "Elm Tree House." In this school the Rev. Abram Halsey, his brother, was a teacher. Judge Ricord, venerable librarian of the New Jersey Histocical Society, and ex-Mayor of Newark, New Jersey, was one of his pupils. Judge Ricord was a student at the school when Lafayette passed through that village in 1825, Captain Luther Halsey being one of his military escorts, and he well remembers the enthusiastic reception of the noble Frenchman by the students and their teachers. A few years later Mr. Halsey moved to Elizabethtown (now City of Elizabeth) where, at "Chilton Hill," he established one of the most prosperous boys' schools in the United States. At this house, "Chilton Hill," he died, July 2nd, 1842, in the forty-fifth year of his age. A monument to his memory, erected by his pupils, stands now in Evergreen Cemetery, Elizabeth, New Jersey.

In the "Newark Daily Advertiser" of July 3rd, Editor William B. Kinney thus laments his personal friend:—"In the death of Rev. John T. Halsey, society in this vicinity has sustained another severe loss. Mr. Halsey established a private boarding-school for boys at his own residence in Elizabethtown, some years ago, which had secured a high reputation, and his removal in the midst of his usefulnness is therefore a subject of general regret. His personal and private virtues had endeared him to a large circle of friends who have other reasons for lamenting his decease."

In a later issue of the "Advertiser" the Rev. David Magie, of Elizabethtown, observes in a communication from that town, "we have been visited with great affliction in the death of the Rev. John T. Halsey, and the breaking up of his flourishing school."

But the good work of the dead teacher was taken up after a brief time by the late Rev. David H. Pierson, Ph. D., his able assistant, and carried on most successfully until ill-health overtook him. The Rev. David H. Pierson was succeeded by the lamented Rev. John F. Pingry, Ph. D., of Elizabeth, who was also an instructor at Chilton Hill. These two honored and distinguished clergymen, constantly bore loving testimony to the piety, intelligence and progressive spirit of their honored leader, whose methods they brought down to the present generation.

Rev. JOHN TAYLOR HALSEY.

The Rev. John T. Halsey was married on the 10th of April, 1820, to Margaret Oakley, daughter of James Oakley, a New York merchant. Their marriage took place at No. 48 Liberty Street, New York City, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. Paschal N. Strong.

We quote the following from Dr. David Magie's sermon preached at his funeral:—

"Of the scenes and events of his earlier life, the counsels of wisdom given him by his venerated fatther, and his own youthful consecration of himself to the Saviour, I must not now stop to speak. His first and chosen work was the ministry of the Gospel. But subsequent circumstances conspired to fix him in the very important though not always duly estimated business of a teacher. For about a quarter of a century he was an accomplished and successful instructor of youth, and fourteen years of this period he has passed among us, exalting his vocation by a degree of ability and diligence seldom surpassed and winning consideration and respect for himself. As an instructor, he had few, if any, superiors. His eulogy, in this respect, is written on a substance far more enduring than the finest marble. The eye of many a pupil will moisten with tears as it meets the record of his death. But in no one respect did his character appear brighter than that of husband and father. No words of mine can express the sense I have of his real worth in these tender relations or the consequent loss which his affectionate wife and large group of children have sustained. Here, our friend acted his part pre-eminently well. The hearts of all the members of his household safely trusted in him."

Brown Brothers & Co., the bankers, for thirty-eight years, having entered their employ as a boy at the age of 14 years. In 1865 he was appointed agent of the firm at New Orleans, and he served the house there and at Mobile, Ala., faithfully until the fall of 1886, when he was transferred to New York to take charge of the sterling exchange department, signing for the firm per procuration. Prepared for college principally at Woodbridge Hall, Perth Amboy, and entered Rutgers in 1845, but did not graduate, being called home by the death of his mother. His father and himself being at the time in poor health, he took charge of the farm for two years; in the mean time commenced the study of medicine, entered Jefferson Medical College and graduated March, 1852, some 7 months before he was 21 years of age; went to Europe that summer to complete his professional studies; took a course in Dublin, Ireland, in London, England, and in Paris, France, being almost continually in the Hospitals; received a commission through Prof. Velpeau as surgeon in the French navy; went to Sebastapool and the Crimea; resigned after 11 months' service, and came home, being surgeon on merchant sailing vessels of the Cape line both going and returning. He settled in Swedesboro, N. J., Jan. 5, 1855, and practiced his profession here 'till July, 1862, when he accepted a commission in the Army as Asst. Surgeon 7th N. J. Vols., with which Regiment he served till December, '62; then in charge of 120th N. Y. Vols., Gen. Geo. H. Sharpe's Regiment, till Mar. 9, 1863, when he was promoted to Surgeon of the 2d N. J. Vols.; remained with that Regt. till May 31, '64, when it went home at the expiration of its term of service. At the urgent solicitation of the Generals and Surgeons of the 6th Corps, coupled with that of the Medical Director of the Army, he resigned on the Field and entered the Volunteer Corps of Surgeons of the Army. Had charge of the 1st Div. 6th Corps Field Hospital till it reached Petersburg, Va.; was then ordered to City Point, Va., on the James River, to organize and carry on a Depot Field Hospital for the Corps; after the Corps went to the Shenandoah Valley with General Sheridan, he was ordered to wind up the Hospital and turn all over to a Surgeon of the Regular Army who conducted it afterwards as the Hospital for the colored troops. He then had charge of the 3d Div. 5th Corps Depot Field Hospital at City Point for a few months, when he was ordered to the front and there placed in charge of the Medical Dept. of the Artillery Brigade, 6th Corps, which had in the mean time returned to the Army of the Potomac with Gen. Sheridan; while there in front of Petersburg he volunteered to take charge of the Small Pox Hospital, the Medical Director finding it difficult to get any surgeon to consent to assume this unpleasant charge, and for which through the recommendation of the Medical Director he was brevetted Lt.-Col. U. S. Volunteers; remained with the Artillery Brigade until the latter part of June, 1865, when it was disbanded, and he resigned and settled up with the different departments of the Government, and came home resuming his practice in Swedesboro, N. J. In every engagement in which the commands he was in took part—over 38—save the second battle of Fredericksburg, he was on the chief operating corps of the Division he was serving with. He is still in the active practice of his profession and in perfect health. After his return from the war he was Trustee and Clerk of his school district for 18 years, and also Township Superintendent for a number of years. Aaron Ladner Lindsley was born at Troy, N. Y., March 4th, 1817. Thrown upon the world at an early age by the death of his father, he quickly gave evidence of the self reliance and energy which so pre-eminently distinguished him in later years.

He entered a printing office, and before he was twenty he was associate editor of the famous "Troy Whig." Feeling, however, the need of a better equipment for life's work, he left the printing office and betook himself to college. He had no money, no wealthy relatives, but by dint of pluck and perseverance, working while his classmates were playing, he succeeded in acquiring magnificent training, the very difficulties he had to encounter lending new and valuable elements to his education.

It was while in college that he heard the voice of God. What the special circumstances were, we do not know; but that call must have stirred his soul to its profoundest depth, for it changed the whole current of his life. After his graduation at Union College, he studied theology at Union and Princeton, graduating from the latter seminary in 1845, and was ordained to the ministry May 8th, 1846. Four days later he married the noble woman who for forty-five years worked devotedly by his side, and whom God still spares. They might have settled in some comfortable eastern church, but the spirit of the home missionary was within them, and they set their faces westward. Going to Waukesha, Wisconsin, then a small frontier village, they labored and prayed with indefatigable zeal for the upbuilding of the cause of Christ, erecting a church, on which the Doctor labored with his own hands like a common workman, assisting in founding a college, and in many ways promoting the cause so near their hearts. It was a hard field, and we do not wonder that after several years his health gave way. The next sixteen years were spent as pastor of the Presbyterian Church in South Salem, New York. Here, as he often said, he "found a Bethesda." Health returned, and with it new energy in the Master's work. The educational facilities of the place being poor, he started a private school, and for several years discharged the duties of both teacher and pastor. Though the work in South Salem was quiet, it took deep root and ramified widely. At an age which is often called the dead line of the ministry, when most men feel that their best work is nearly done, and begin to think of retiring, Dr. Lindsley stepped from quietness and comparative obscurity, into a field of national importance and usefulness. God made the position in the pulpit of the First Presbyterian Church of Portland, Oregon, and God made the leader in Aaron Ladner Lindsley. The first call was declined. But the church under Providential guidance renewed it, and though more inviting pulpits were seeking him, he was led of the Lord to Portland. After a long and toilsome journey overland, he arrived in July, 1868, his family, with the exception of the eldest son, who came with the father, following by way of the isthmus a few months later. The work which that man, already old and in delicate health, was enabled to accomplish in the ensuing eighteen years, was simply marvelous, and can scarcely be paralleled in the history of American Presbyterianism. He found a small church of but 87 members, but under his splendid leadership that church grew until it became one of the most powerful churches in our denomination. He attracted to it many of the ablest business and professional men of the community, who nobly seconded him in his work. The development was steady and rapid, until 745 new members had united with the church. But his work was not confined to his own church. He was too big a man to be confined within four walls, or to be circumscribed by city limits. He felt that he was called to be not only pastor of the first church of Portland, but pastor of the whole Pacific northwest. He had facilities and backing for work of that kind, which no other minister in this whole region had. The pastor of a strong, self-supporting church, the spirit of the home missionary burned within him. Like Paul, he felt that he was "debtor" to all who were within the range of his influence, and so he became a father of home missions and a founder of churches. For 12 years he was chairman of an executive committee to which, first the Presbytery and then the Synod, committed the superintendence of missions in the northwest. He himself organized 21 churches and dedicated 22. The amount of traveling and correspondence and care and labor involved in this work, was simply prodigious, but he did it ably and uncomplainingly. He saw one Presbytery and 14 ministers grow into a Synod, 3 Presbyteries, 52 ministers and 63 churches. Almost all of those churches received substantial aid from the First Church, almost all those ministers came here through his influence, or received their first welcome from him. A steady stream of benevolence flowed from the First Church in every direction. There is hardly a Presbyterian Church in the whole Pacific northwest which has not First Church timbers in it. The benevolence of this church alone during his pastorate, reached the colossal figure of $240,000. Justly was he called the "Bishop of the Northwest." In Portland alone, the one church developed into eight churches, to every one of which the First Church contributed largely in both money and membership. But his sympathies were not confined to those of his own race. They went out to the Indian tribes of the Northwest. He visited their reservations, and his heart was stirred within him as he saw their degradation and spiritual destitution. He preached and prayed and labored for them, until he saw missions started among the Nez Perces, the Puyallups, the Umatillas and the Spokanes, and other tribes, and earning from the red men themselves the title "Father of the Indian." It was Dr. Lindsley who sent J. C. Mallory, the first missionary to Alaska. It was Dr. Lindsley who sent Mrs. McFarland, the first teacher, to Alaska. It was Dr. Lindsley in person who organized the first American Church in Alaska, and who secured the money and the materials for the edifice which sheltered it. To Dr. Lindsley alone, under God, belongs the honor of sending the gospel of Jesus Christ to that vast and benighted region. Rude and barbarous though the Alaskan Indians were, they appreciated his interest and loved and reverenced him. A Chief of the Stalkeen Tribe adopted him as a son and made him a chief, conferring upon him the name Tenatac, "the Priceless Name," the highest honor an Alaskan tribe can confer, and one which no other white man has ever received. The last five years of his life were spent in California, but the change of residence involved no change of loyalty. He was in California as an Oregonian, as the representative of the Pacific Northwest in the San Francisco Theological Seminary.

Looking at Dr. Lindsley, the man, we observe some marked characteristics. No one could come in contact with him without being impressed with the mingled courtesy and dignity of his manner. He was a gentleman of the old school. One was impressed also with the studiousness of his habits, and the culture of his mind. He was an indefatigable student all his life. His studies were often protracted till long past midnight. He never even traveled or went off for a vacation without taking some books and writing materials with him. He persued the path of plain duty, and this brought him usefulness so substantial and of such magnitude as to make his life an example which ordinary men can safely follow, and at the same time confer the more distinguished and lasting honor on his name. But beneath all and above all, was a deep piety, an unswerving personal allegiance to Christ and his church. It was this that nerved him and sustained him. It was this that fertilized the soil out of which such rich fruitage grew. His devotion to his Lord had all the intensity of a passion. He did not die; he was translated. It was Sabbath, August 9, 1891. A holy calm prevailed. He worshipped God with the little congregation near his country residence. He read the Scriptures. He prayed. He sung with answering thrills of joy—

"Jesus, thy name I love,
All other names above,
Jesus, my Lord !"

As he passed out, his eye kindled as he recalled the day when he had organized the church, and as he planned the organization of another in a neighboring community. And then, while still thinking and speaking of the Master's work he loved so well, suddenly, in the twinkling of an eye, he was caught up and was not, for God took him. 11.12.1195.—Edwin Lindsley, b. May 29, 1840; living at Charleston, S. C.; m. Maria T. Olney, dau. of George W., formerly of Providence, R. I. He was an artillery officer in the Confederate Army, and Gen. Wade Hampton in an article in the Oct., 1887, Century Magazine, describing the battle of Bentonville, thus speaks of Capt. E. L. Halsey's battery:—

"This absence of Hardee left a gap between Bragg and Stewart; and in order to hold this gap until the arrival of Hardee, I had two batteries of horse artillery—Capts. Halsey and Earle—placed in the vacant space. The former of these batteries had constituted a part of the Hampton Legion; it served with me during all the campaigns in Virginia, making an honorable and brilliant record, and it joined me at Bentonville, just in time to render efficient service in the last battle in which we fought together. All the guns of both batteries were admirably served, and their fire held the enemy in their front until Hardee reached his allotted position."

A member of the same artillery company in an article written for the "Charleston News and Courier" of August 25, 1893, thus speaks of Captain Halsey:—

"At the promotion of Hart First Lieut. E. L. Halsey became captain. Halsey had been elected first lieutentant at the reorganization in April, 1862. He was cool, calm, fearless and as firm as a rock in battle. He loaded the gun that threw the first ball fired by the Confederacy, (the Star of the West was fired on by State troops,) against the United States flag, and he commanded the battery that fired the last shot.

Some of your readers will remember that on the morning of the 8th of March, 1861, a shot was fired accidentally from the Iron Battery at Cumming's Point that struck Fort Sumter. Few know the history of that ball. The Washington Artillery was stationed on Morris Island and had charge of the Iron Battery, the three guns of which were trailed on Fort Sumter.

The men drilled at these guns every morning and evening, hoping that each day would bring orders to open fire. At last it became monotonous and on the evening of the 7th of March, while marching from the battery to camp after a drill, Private Halsey said "he was tired of this nonsense, and that there would be some fun in the harbor the next morning." When drilling at the guns on the following morning, to the astonishment of everybody, one of them was found to be loaded, the shot from which struck Fort Sumter. Of course no one knew anything about it. Col. Maxcy Gregg in his report to Gen. Beauregard says "he does not suspect that it was put in by any man intentionally"

Gen. Hampton in an address to Hart's Battery said "that they were literally the last guns fired in defence of Southern liberty," in a skirmish near Raleigh, N. C., just before the surrender of Johnson's army. The battery on that occasion was commanded by Capt. Halsey."

They celebrated their golden wedding Sept. 11, 1861, on which occasion their son Theodore was married. She d. in Brooklyn, N. Y., June 26, 1868, and is buried at Rockaway, N. J.

Mrs. Jackson possessed the characteristics of her brothers, in that she was a woman of more than ordinary intellectual tastes. The mother of a large family, she found time to gratify her love of books to an extent that was unusual; the moments were improved to add to her stock of information in regard to current events, and to store her mind with valuable knowledge. Modest and unasuming, none but her immediate family were aware of her acquaintance with historical and other books gained in the spare moments of a busy life. Gentle and lovely in character and disposition, she governed her large family with love, combined with firmness. Her charity was unbounded, and her Christian character was exemplified in her daily life without ostentation.

Her husband, William Jackson, was born March 16, 1788. Early as 1812 he embarked in the manufacture of iron, in which he was engaged until 1833, building, in connection with his brother, Col. Joseph Jackson, the Rolling Mill at Rockaway in 1821. In 1823 he commenced a new enterprise, building a furnace and saw mill and several dwellings for workmen at Clinton (then Bergen County), New Jersey, which were completed July 4, 1824, at which date the first iron was made there. He had purchased some 1200 acres of timber land, about the falls, from which charcoal was made, with which to carry on the manufacture of iron. Having sold the property in 1833, he removed to Hamburg, Sussex County, where he built for a company a blast furnace, which was operated for several years. Changes in the tariff by the act of 1832, which gradually reduced the duty upon iron, caused the making of iron to be suspended about 1840. In 1837 he removed to East Avon, N. Y., where he resided on a farm, removing subsequently to Brooklyn, N. Y., where he lived for many years, and where he died October 18, 1872. He was buried at Rockaway, N. J.

11.12.2613.—Samuel Beach, b. July 24, 1796; graduated at Union College in 1815, studied law with Gov. Jas. Talmadge, in Poughkeepsie, was admitted to the practice of law in the Supreme Court of N. Y., Oct. 30, 1818, and continued an active practitioner until 1834, when he removed to Rockaway, N. J. After his removal to New Jersey, he abandoned the active practice of law and became largely interested in the manufacturing interests of Morris County, and carried on at the same time extensive mercantile and agricultural interests. In all these relations he was eminently successful, and amassed a considerable property. He was called to fill honorable and responsible positions in civil life ; and in whatever he did, whether of a business or Legislative character, a prominent bent of his nature showed itself to be a rare gift of imparting wise and prudent counsel, whether of a private or public nature. In politics he was an Old Line Whig, and as such was one term, 1826, elected to the New York Legislature from Dutchess Co., when the balance of the ticket met with disastrous defeat; in such high esteem was his worth as a man regarded. In 1830 he was again elected a member of the same body. In 1841 he was elected as Assemblyman from Morris County on the Whig ticket, and served the term in the Legislature very acceptably to his constituents. The next term he was again elected and did service in that Assembly as Speaker. In 1846 he was appointed Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of this County, which position he filled until 1851, when he retired from active political and professional life, only occasionally to fill positions of a township or municipal nature at the urgent request of his fellow citizens, without regard to party distinctions. In later years he was a staunch Republican, not swerving to either extreme of his party, but conservative and firm in his opinions and beliefs.

He united with the Rockaway Pres. Church in 1835 and in 1841 was made a ruling elder. His excellent judgment and knowledge of men were frequently made use of in the councils of the church.

His educational and literary attainments were of a high order, and could only be measured by the large and liberal tastes of the true scholar. The material of his thought was wonderfully rich, and his ideas upon any subject, however intricate, were neither barren nor impoverished, but were at once as full and clear cut as they were brilliant. Nor did they stop in the mere pursuit of classical and mathematical investigation, but were carried out to the closest detail in active, practical life, and gave marked importance to the smallest matter.

But the crowning beauty of his life was his kind and beautiful character, whose generous impulses were as free and boundless as they were systematized; and therefore of the greater practical importance. His sympathies and interest in any good cause were large and generous, and if he was not the proposer of any worthy movement, he was always ready and willing to second it with his endorsement and material assistance. To what extent this is the case, one has only to recall his church connections for forty years; and more especially his anxiety that the church with which he was connected should be furnished with a parsonage before he died. For that purpose he offered grounds on either side of the church, and supplemented the offer with a handsome amount of money, an offer which his children subsequently fulfilled.

He married Sept. 5, 1821, Sarah Dubois, only daughter of Col. Joseph Jackson and Elizabeth Platt Ogden, who died after a long illness Jan. 20, 1859. He died at Rockaway of dysentery Sept. 15, 1871, and was buried in the Rockaway church yard. His funeral services were at his house on the 18th, Rev. O. H. Perry Deyo preaching his funeral sermon from the very appropriate text:—"Sound in faith, in charity, in patience."

11.12.2614.—Abraham A., b. Oct. 8, 1798, at 1 A. M.; m. 1835, Elizabeth, dau. of Col. Greenwood LeFlore of Grenada, Miss., who d. in Mississippi in 1847, aged about 28, leaving 3 children.

He was b. at Fishkill, N. Y.; was fitted for college by Daniel H. Barnes at Poughkeepsie; entered Junior class Union College in 1813, but lost a year by ill health, and graduated in 1816; studied medicine for a time with his father, but disliking that profession studied law with Thos. J. Oakley, Esq., at Poughkeepsie, then with Mr. Thompson at Monticello, and after his death with Mr. Thompson's brother-in-law, Minot Mitchell, of White Plains. He was induced to begin his law practice at Liberty, Sullivan Co., where his father had a small farm, and which was then a new settlement inhabited principally by lumbermen. It took two days to drive to Liberty, but it took only one to return to Fishkill. Becoming dissatisfied with the profession he formed a partnership first, with Sylvanus Rapalje, and afterwards with a Mr. Doty, and carried on a mercantile business in New York for a few years. He was afterwards in business as a broker for two years, but lost his property principally through the depreciation of Morris Canal stock. After this he went abroad on business for his cousin, John C. Halsey, and spent a year in England and France. While in France, one of our public functionaries died, and by invitation of Gen. Lafayette, Mr. Halsey accompanied the remains to LaGrange. The funeral services over, he would have returned immediately to Paris, but the hospitable Marquis would not consent to part with him so soon and entertained him in magnificent style at his chateau for several weeks, assigning to him a suit of rooms with an American servant, and placing at his disposal his stable and carriages for any excursion the beautiful country invited. After this he spent two years traveling through Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, settling up business matters for his cousin, John C. Halsey, who carried on an extensive fur and hat trade through those States. The country was still hardly settled and most of his traveling was done on horseback. He was always a very religious man and in his travels whenever his business permitted, acted as a missionary, distributing Bibles, tracts, &c. He became acquainted with Mr. Lane and other gentlemen then engaged in the founding of Lane Seminary. Mr. Lane gave him $10,000 with which to purchase goods in N. Y. and transport them to Vicksburg, selling them on joint account. When he arrived at Vicksburg he found that the market was already overstocked and the new city itself in the possession of a "reckless, gambling, murderous set of rowdies," who made it an unfit place for well disposed people to live. He therefore went to Rankin, a place in the interior of the State, and after two years of persevering labor disposed of his stock without loss to his partner but with no great profit to himself. He now went into business for himself, accumulated some property, and married Miss LeFlore, whose father, Col. Greenwood LeFlore, was a very wealthy planter, and Chief of the Choctaw nation. Col. LeFlore was a thoroughly Union man throughout the late war, and openly defied Gen. Forrest and other Confederate officers to disturb him. Gen. Sherman went out of his way to visit him. His character was so high and his position so assured that the only injury he received was the burning of his outbuildings which Gen. Forrest ordered done. At the time of his marriage Mr. Halsey had accumulated about $100,000 and was settled upon a plantation belonging to his wife where he was beloved by all, both white and black. Dr., afterwards U. S.

Senator, Gwin, who was then a commission merchant in New Orleans, induced him to become his partner. He even assumed Mr. Halsey's consent and organized the house and moved on accordingly. In less than six months Mr. Halsey's fortune had disappeared and some $90,000 which Gen. LeFlore paid for him. This was in 1840, and in attempting to make the money to repay his father-in-law, who, however, never asked it of him, Mr. Halsey spent the remainder of his life. For years he labored saving to the Choctaw Indians claims which were due them from the Government, but of which they had been robbed by unscrupulous agents. He made a great deal for the Indians, but after years spent in the pestilential lowlands of the Yazoo, came out no better off financially himself. He then turned to Texas and secured a large body of land which he spent two years in Germany and England endeavoring to place. From England he went to Central America to look after certain gold mines at the request of their English owners, and here at Panama he died of nervous bilious fever March 17, 1852.

"He was from his earliest youth and throughout his eventful life distinguished for amiability of temper, benevolence of disposition, uprightness and independence of character, and at all times exhibited a deportment so gentlemanly and ingenuous as to win without manifesting any anxiety for it, the friendship, esteem and confidence of all who knew him."

11.12.2615.—Silas Dickerson, b. Nov. 22, 1801; m. 1st, Sept. 12, 1826, Stella Ann Ross, (daughter of David Ross and Mary Hinchman), who d. at Avon, N. Y., Sept. 10, 1834. He m. 2d, Feb. 11, 1835, Ruhamah, (daughter of David and Huldah Pierson). She was b. Nov. 30, 1811, and d. Dec. 19, 1892. He d. at Grand Blanc, Michigan, Feb. 17, 1881.

He lived in Fishkill, till 1822, when he came to New Jersey where he resided until 1834, part of the time at Rockaway, part of the time at Clinton, Bergen Co., and one year (1833) at Powerville, Morris Co. In 1834 he removed to Avon, Livingston Co., N. Y., and in 1837 to Grand Blanc, Genessee Co., Mich., where he spent the remainder of his life.

When he first removed to Michigan, it was an entirely new country, and for a month he and his wife kept house in a log school house. He first built a log house to which he moved 2d of Dec., 1834, and in this he lived in comparative comfort for fourteen years and until his farm was under good cultivation and a new frame house was built. At the first town meeting after his arrival he was elected Assessor and held the office seven years. He was then elected Supervisor, then Treasurer, then again Supervisor, and nearly all his life held positions of public trust, always with honor to himself and the perfect satisfaction of his fellow townsmen. He was a member of the Pres. Church in New Jersey and remained a faithful adherent to the cause of religion until the time of his death. Mr. Halsey was a representative man. It is rare to find a combination of good qualities in one person, such that the character is in all its points of marked excellence. He was one of these exceptional men. His was that valuable treasure, a good disposition. With this were joined good executive abilities, soundness of judgment, considerativeness and discretion. In him was sterling excellence of purpose and of deed. He was efficient and helpful. A long life testified to his usefulness. The esteem of neighbors and town people and acquaintances, the deep attachment and veneration of relatives and connections, through these years, declare that he was a man of more than usual worth. Mr. Halsey was a man of unassuming manners, courteous and polite in social intercourse, charitable and tolerant toward those with whom he differed in opinion, a kind father and affectionate husband. He was honored by his friends, loved and reverenced by his relatives. His life was one of peace and charity toward all men and he had a host of friends and no enemies.

Mrs. Halsey's father lived in her childhood at Liberty street, and then cor. Murray street and Broadway. They had a country place in Columbia street, where they spent their summers and in which the family finally resided all the year round. It fell to William Ogilvie in the division of the estate. The tide came up to it so that at one time the cellar had to be pumped out. Mr. Halsey lived for many years in New York City, attending to his own real estate and that of his wife which was very extensive. Several years before his death he made his farm at Hanover, N. J., which had previously been his summer residence, his permanent home and here he died. He avoided political contests, and though frequently urged to accept nominations to office uniformly declined. He was honorable in all his dealings and though retiring in his disposition had many friends. The farm on which he lived in Hanover was bought by his father of his uncle, Jacob Halsey, and probably was bought by him of the Cook family. The farm adjoining and which he gave to his son Peter, was the Gen. Pruden Alling place, whose wife was an aunt of Mrs. Jacob Halsey.

In 1811 he was sent by John Jacob Astor with a party to establish a fur trading post in Astoria, Oregon. On his return to New York he went into the fur business on his own account and was very successful. He was an Elder in Dr. Spring's church which was then on the lot bounded by Beekman, Nassau and Park Row. He lived at first on St. John's Park, then in Leroy Place, Bleecker street, and was building in Chambers street, near the Griswold House, when he died. He had collected in his travels a large amount of rare and valuable articles, pictures, &c., for his new house, which were destroyed in the great fire of 1837.

11.12.2632.—Mary Alling, (so named from her aunt, Mrs. Pruden Alling, who was a woman celebrated in her neighborhood for her beautiful character and wide benevolence), b. in New York City, Feb. 13, 1795; m. Darcy, in Newark, April 18, 1872, and is buried with her husband in the Evergreen Cemetery in Morristown.

Mr. Drake was b. at Drakesville, Sept. 16, 1788; was fitted for college by Rev. Amzi Armstrong, and grad. at Princeton in 1808; studied law with Sylvester Russell in Morristown, and in 1812 was admitted to the bar. In 1823 and the three following years he was elected to the House of Assembly and was Speaker during the last two terms. In December, 1826, he was appointed a Justice of the Supreme Court, and to accommodate his district removed to Burlington, where he resided five years, and then to Trenton where he resided two years. In the last part of his term he was called upon with Chief Justice Ewing to decide the celebrated Shotwell vs. Hendrickson and DeCou case, which grew out of the division in the Society of Friends. Judge Drake's decision was very unsatisfactory to the Hicksites who were the losing party, and through their influence the State became Democratic at the next election, and Judge Drake was succeeded by Thos. C. Ryerson, who, however, did what he could to have his friend reappointed. The result was anticipated when the decision was rendered, but the Judge did not on that account hesitate to declare his convictions with the greatest freedom. In 1835 he returned to Morristown where he died May 6, 1837. He was an Elder in the First Church in Morristown, and exceedingly conscientious in the discharge of every duty. Mr. William L. King describing him, says, "I suppose no man ever stood higher in public estimation in Morristown, either socially, or as a safe and trusted counsellor."

11.12.2633.—Eliza, b. Dec., 1796; d. unmarried in Morristown, Sept., 1819, and was buried in N. Y. City in the Brick Church, afterwards removed from there to church yard in Second Ave.

"Mr. Halsey might be called the "Father of Astoria." In the year 1835 Mr. Halsey purchased a large tract of land situated around the ferry or what was then called Hallett's Cove. Shortly afterwards he settled in the place, and was universally marked as a man of energy and progressiveness. At that time less than twenty houses stood in the neighborhood, and about the first work undertaken by him was the laying out of streets and avenues through his property. He was at this time engaged in the fur business in New York City. His next move was the erection of a number of handsome and commodious buildings, many of which stand to this day and will continue to rear their stately eminences as monuments of their builder for generations to come. Mr. Halsey evidently thought the neighborhood was worthy of having some recognition and importance, and accordingly he procured the passage of a bill by the Legislature incorporating it as a village, the name "Astoria" being adopted after John Jacob Astor of New York, an old friend of Mr. Halsey's. About 25 years ago in company with the late Byram K. Stevens and Henry L. Riker, he bought several farms and laid through them streets and avenues. This property has ever since been constantly improving. It is bounded by Broadway, Grand street, Second avenue and The Crescent. He donated a tract of land, 100 by 200 feet, extending from Academy street to First Avenue, for school purposes. A commodious school house was shortly afterwards erected on this site, which is to-day used by the Fourth Ward school. He invested in other property, in almost every instance showing his progressive spirit by laying out streets, grading them, &c. The ferry (then running to 86th street) was owned by him up to 1860, and he it was who placed the first modern ferryboat on the line. He was a great lover of horticulture, and in the garden in front of Capt. Monson's house on Fulton street may be seen some of the largest Magnolia trees on Long Island, 75 feet in height, planted by him. He had a particular admiration for shade trees which he gratuitously gave to parties desirous of planting shade trees in front of their property. The fine Elms on Washington street and Perrot Avenue still stand as specimens of his planting.

Mr. Halsey was a gentleman who all through the last forty years of his eventful life took an active interest in the welfare of the village, having served for many years as one of the Trustees and President of that Board. He was ever advocating improvement and probably did more than any other one man to build up the place. For generosity in public as well as in private affairs he was always noted. He donated the site upon which the Presbyterian Church stands and erected that sacred edifice. When the Astoria Catholic Church was being built on Newtown Avenue he furnished gratis the necessary stone for the foundation. But our space will not permit us to further enumerate his acts of liberality. We cannot help saying, however, that in his death the poor man will lose his best friend. In the days when wages were low and living somewhat precarious, he never paid his laborers less than a dollar per day, even when others in the neighborhood paid but seventy-five cents. Workingmen in straightened circumstances who rented or purchased property from him were never oppressed when their payments became due. Such large-hearted men are rare and their loss is always a public calamity."

He was apprenticed when a lad of sixteen years to Mr. Oliver Wade in "the Swamp" as the district is called south of Market street and between Halsey and High streets, and was afterwards with Messrs. J. N. Utter, C. M. King and H. Waters in the shoe trade. The name of the firm was Halsey, Utter & Co., and their place of business was on the north corner of Broad and Market streets. Here Mr. Halsey acquired a large competency. In 1837 he was elected President of the Mechanics Bank of Newark and held that position until its suspension in 1882. His age and infirmities prevented him from giving much personal attention to the affairs of the bank in its later years, and its failure was entirely unexpected by him and the shock no doubt hastened his end. In 1839 he was elected Recorder of Newark and held that office until 1843. He was a Director in the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., and in the New Jersey Insurance Co., was one of the founders of Fairmount Cemetery and filled many positions of trust. He was one of Newark's most honored men. Generous, charitable and most kindly in manner, he had the confidence of all who knew him.

1224259.—Samuel, b. Oct. 11, 1801; d. June 17, 1884, at Newark; m. Nov. 23, 1825, Mary Hutchings, who was b. April 26, 1802, and d. May 23, 1882. She was the daughter of Abram Hutchings (who d. Feb. 6, 1813, aged 46 years), and Margaret, his wife, (who d. Mar. 28, 1864, in her 87th year) They lived in the Hutchings House, one of the three which survived the burning of Springfield in 1780. It shows a cannon ball hole in the west end, and bullets were imbedded in its woodwork.

Mrs. Samuel Halsey's grandmother was Isabel Fraser; she married 1st, ——— MacIntosh, who came to America in Wolfe's Army, and was killed at Quebec; she married then John MacIntyre, and her daughter, Margaret MacIntyre, married Abraham Hutchings of New York. It is related of her that when the British made their raid upon Elizabeth in 1780, they robbed her house of all they could carry off, and one soldier presented his bayonet to her heart and threatened to kill her unless she would give up a cape she had on. She said she would die first and the soldier gave it up. They were all of them Scotch people. She was one hundred years old when she died.

The following obituary notice of Mr. Halsey is taken from the "Newark Daily Advertiser" of June 24, 1884:

"Samuel Halsey, for many years a leading business man of Newark. died at 12.30 o'clock, Monday night, at his residence, No. 13 West Park street. Mr. Halsey had been confined to his house for about two years from the infirmities of age. Four weeks ago his weakness seemed to become greater, and early this month a slight attack of paralysis gave warning that the end was near. He has been slowly sinking for several days and passed away peacefully soon after midnight.

"Mr. Halsey was born in the township of Springfield, then in Essex County, on October 11, 1801. He was the youngest son of Isaac Halsey, and the family had resided in that section since 1684. Mr. Halsey remained at the homestead during all his youth and early manhood, and was married to the daughter of a neighbor, Miss Mary Hutchings, on November 23d, 1825. Mrs. Halsey died two years ago in May. Their golden wedding in 1875 was a notable occasion. In the year 1845 Mr. Halsey left Springfield for Newark and became a member of the firm of Pierson, Waldron & Halsey, who were engaged in the Southern clothing trade, their establishment being located over the old store of S. R. W. Heath & Co. The firm name was subsequently changed to Pierson & Halsey, but in 1848 Mr. Halsey retired from this business and established the leather manufacturing firm of Halsey & Taylor, successors to D. B. Crockett & Co., at the corner of Springfield Avenue and Shipman street. Here the business still remains but in vastly increased proportions. The firm became S. Halsey & Son in 1866 and so continued.

"Though he had been active in township affairs in Springfield, Mr. Halsey was averse to public office and would never permit the use of his name for political position in Newark, except on one occasion, when, in 1860, he became an Alderman from the Second Ward and served for two years. He declined to become a candidate for re-election and devoted his energies to building up his business. He was a Director in the Firemen's Insurance Company and for a time a Director in the Second National Bank; but, as in political affairs, avoided office when possible. Early in life he became a member of the Springfield Presbyterian Church, and on his removal to Newark connected himself with the Central Presbyterian Church, of which he was an Elder for many years. He was a devoted Christian and a leading member of the congregation during his active life. As the weight of age began to make itself felt, Mr. Halsey drew more and more from the cares of business and has not for a number of years taken any active part in the management of the firm's affairs, the burden of which was assumed by his son and partner, Hon. George A. Halsey. He has resided at No. 13 West Park street for about thirty years.

"Mr. Halsey leaves two sons, ex-Congressman George A. Halsey and Silas C. Halsey, and one daughter, Cornelia U. Halsey. He leaves also several grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. The bearers at his funeral were his sons and grandsons, five in number, and a nephew.

"The deceased gentleman in his prime and until a few years ago was remarkably fine looking, stalwart in figure and dignified in demeanor. His personal characteristics were loveable, and among the older residents of the city none was more generally respected for uprightness of character. His departure makes another vacancy in the fast-thinning ranks of old-time Newark business men to whom the prosperity of the community was largely due."

"He came here when Springfield was little more than a settlement in the woods, and was very public-spirited and foremost in any movement calculated to advance the real interests of the place in any way. Indeed indirectly this spirit caused his removal in 1849. A new cemetery was to be located. Mr. Halsey, who was a true lover of nature and of the woods, used all his influence for the selection of the ground upon which Wittenburg College now stands. The Council, or Trustees, however, chose the Grammount location, and as a first move, cut down all the fine forest trees. That fixed Benton in his decision, and he left never to return, it proved. A later generation has vindicated his judgment and good taste, by purchasing and improving for cemetery purposes, a tract as near that chosen by him long years ago as could be obtained, and no resident of the city to-day need be told what a vision of beauty in its naturalness Ferncliff was and will be. Mr. Halsey was inclined to eccentricity and something of a practical joker in his way. Numberless illustrations of this trait can be given by our old settlers of this day and generation. He remained a bachelor up to the time of leaving here, but we are told married not long after, and we should judge, was held in the same estimation in his new location as this. He made friends without apparent effort. He was without a college education, and was essentially a self-made man. In 1840 he conducted 'The War Club,' a campaign paper in the interest of Wm. Henry Harrison for President, and it was a vigorous sheet. Afterwards he was one of the publishers of 'The Pioneer.' 'The Pioneer' became 'The Republic,' of which paper Mr. Halsey is regarded as the founder. He was a practical printer, and a man of great foresight and intelligence. Files of 'The Pioneer' and 'Weekly Republic' are preserved in this office, and are frequently consulted for one purpose or another.

This account might be continued almost indefinitely, but enough has been written to give an idea of the leading characteristics of a worthy man and former prominent citizen."

"Early in the past century, ——— Cole and his wife, Susan, came from the Island of Barbadoes to the Cape Fear region. Their daughter, Anne, was twice married, first to Colonel William Mosely, (by whom she had issue one daughter and three sons,) and subsequently to William Ross. Susanna, daughter of William and Anne Ross, married Henry Halsey of New Jersey; to them were born a son and four daughters. The subject of this notice, fourth in order of birth, was born at the family home, Soracte, near Wilmington, May 10th, 1799. Bereaved of both parents at a very tender age, she was sent to Newark, N. J., to be educated under the direction of her paternal Uncle, Judge William Halsey. Returning to Wilmington during the war between the United States and Great Britain, she was married on May 13th, 1818, to Samuel Langdon, a son of Paul Langdon who served in the Revolutionary Army, and a grandson of Rev. Samuel Langdon, D.D., an ex-President of Harvard University.

"Left at his death, in 1832, with limited means to rear and educate six young children, she entered upon her life-work with self-sacrifice, love and devotion rarely equaled, and which only the recipients of her efforts, trials and labors can estimate and appreciate. How well and truly she fulfilled all her duties, domestic, religious and social, the community in which she passed her four score and four years will attest, and her record of a well spent life is made up on high. Faithful and exemplary in every relation of life, and for a half a century an humble, devout and consistent member of St. James Episcopal Church; in peace and love and charity with all men, she, with firm faith and trust in the atoning merits of her Blessed Redeemer, calmly closed her eyes to the scenes of this life, to open them again upon the glories of life eternal. * * * In this spirit, knowing in whom she believed, her surviving children have laid to rest in Oakdale Cemetery, the fleshly garment of a beloved Mother, who has left to them the rich legacy and example of a holy and dutiful life, full of sweet and pleasant memories."

Mr. Halsey studied law with his uncle, William Halsey, with whom he lived after his father's death. After his first wife's death he entered N. Y. Theo. Sem. and was ordained a deacon first in Trinity. He was killed May 2, 1855, and the following is an account of his death from the "New York Herald" of May 3d:—

"A most sad casualty yesterday deprived us of one of our most exemplary clergymen, the Rev. Charles H. Halsey, Rector of Christ Church. It appears that Mr. Halsey was visiting the new building now in progress adjoining the Everett House on Union Square, for the purpose of inspecting parts of the workmanship, to which as well as to some other buildings, his attention had been drawn in view of the erection of a parsonage for his church. He was standing on the fourth floor of the edifice, looking through the opening of the large central windows which as yet are without sashes. The sill of this window is unusually near the floor and in approaching it the probability is that he lost his balance and fell through to the ground, a distance of some sixty feet. He never spoke after the fall and survived the injury but about half an hour. A very large circle of attached friends will join with the congregation which Mr. Halsey so worthily served, in deploring this disastrous event which has deprived the community of one of its most faithful, laborious and consistent ministers of the gospel. Mr. Halsey was in his 46th year. He was a son-in-law of President King of Columbia College.

"Funeral was May 5th at Christ Church, from his late residence, 9 East 18th st.; burial at Jamaica, L. I."

Dec. 30, 1846, Mary Marsh of Aurora, N. Y. She d. April 2, 1887. The following obituary is from the "Trumansburg Free Press":

"J. Sandford Halsey was a son of the pioneer, Dr. Halsey, and was born near the spot where his present store stands, where he had been engaged in the hardware business about 20 years. For several years previous he kept the hotel at Taughannock. Until within a few years he took an active part in political affairs and was always considered one of the pillars of Democracy of the town and county. His counsels, even after he ceased to take an active interest in politics, were eagerly sought after and his judgment never questioned. As a business man he won confidence by correct, methodical methods and sterling integrity. He was no time server, but outspoken and often brusque in manner, yet possessing the kindest of hearts. In religion he was an Episcopalian, devout and sincere, a firm believer in everything he professed, and during his last illness his Christian fortitude and perfect faith in 'Him who hath power to save,' was but the natural sequence of a consistent 'Christian life.'"

Children of 13151.10 Sarah Radley Halsey and Jared Sandford, her 1st husband.

"Gen. Sandford was born Oct. 26, 1801, in a log house a little west of the present village of Lodi, then a part of Ovid township. In 1805 his father built the house about one mile north of Lodi village now occupied by Mr. Herman D. Eastman. Halsey Sandford lived on the farm and attended the schools in the neighborhood until about 19 years of age, when he taught school for a short time, then served as clerk in a store—first for Gen. D. Jackson, at Trumansburg, and afterward for the late Gen. John DeMott, at Lodi. In the fall of 1821 he located in that part of the town of Reading, Steuben Co., now Starkey, Yates Co., and engaged in mercantile business, which he conducted successfully until 1830, when he sold out to Mr. Adna Treat. He was the first town clerk of Starkey after the organization of Yates county, and was postmaster of the same town until the spring of 1831, when he resigned. In that year he returned to Lodi, and entered into partnership with the late Gen. John DeMott in the mercantile and produce business, which they conducted on a large scale until 1838, when Gen. Sandford retired. During 1836, '37 and '38 he was supervisor of Lodi, and in 1838 was elected county clerk of this county, which office he held for three years. In the fall of 1848 he came to this village, where he has resided to the present time. Here he continued his old business of merchandise, connected with produce, doing an extensive business until 1861. Since coming here he has held various official positions, the most important of which was that of postmaster for ten years.

"In the old military days, he was colonel of the 10th N. Y. cavalry, then brigadier-general of the 5th brigade, and later major-general of the 3d division in the same corps.

"On May 1st, 1822, he married Fanny Maria Howell of Warwick, Orange county, N. Y., who still survives him. After the wedding they came in a one-horse chaise to their home at what is now Starkey, Yates County, the trip occupying six days. May 1st, 1872, with many who are here to-day, we had the pleasure of attending their golden wedding; and if he had lived till the first day of May next he would have spent 63 years of happy married life. Of their seven children three have been taken by death, the other four are here to-day.

"Dr. Sandford's family, of which Gen. Sandford was the eldest child, was the most distinguished family in this county, if not in the State. The family had a right to be distinguished—the father and mother were both very remarkable for character and intellectual ability, and the grandfather, Judge Halsey, was the most notable man of his day in all this lake region. Two of Gen. Sandford's brothers attained positions at the head of the New York bar—Lewis Halsey Sandford as chancellor, and judge of the superior court, and Edward as a practicing attorney. The latter was lost on the steamship Arctic, in the prime of life. To the names of these two brothers may be added the name of the late Dr. Sandford Eastman, whose mother was also their mother, standing as he did in the medical profession in Buffalo, where his brothers had stood earlier in the legal profession in New York city. Last fall while at the meeting of synod at Buffalo, and talking with Dr. Strong, one of the oldest physicians in the city, about Dr. Eastman, he said: 'You know in a city like this there are physicians and physicians, but Dr. Eastman as a Christian gentleman and a physician was the first man in this city in his profession.' Gen. Sandford while deprived of the educational advantages so liberally bestowed upon the younger members of the family, was a man of much intellectual force. He was a good business man, who had a relish and a genuine love for business. In the various official positions held by him, he was always courteous, painstaking and faithful. A man of very fine personal appearance and commanding presence, he was always a gentleman.

"Though never making a personal and public profession of religion, he was yet one of the most regular in his attendance at public worship of all the members of this congregation. Always in his place—he always manifested the greatest interest in, and respect for things sacred and holy. Having lived in his family for months, and having known him for more than fourteen years, I cannot recall a single thing he ever said or did which would lead any one to suppose he was not a professing christian. A parallel case I have never known."

"Mr. David H. Halsey was born in the City of Newburgh, Orange County, New York, on the 7th day of December, 1858. He received his education in the Public Schools of Newburgh. As a young business man he is ambitious, self-reliant and industrious. At an early age he accepted the position of Assistant Librarian in the Free Library of his native city. In the intervals of his work he read much and with discrimination in the field of general literature, and when he started "The Critic,"—a paper which commanded attention and challenged criticism as an editorial adventure,—he was unusually well qualified for a work of this character.

"His subsequent career and marked success demonstrates what an indomitable will may accomplish. For a number of years he was first clerk in the book-store of George W. Green, Jr., in Newburgh, and mastered the business in all its details. In 1886 he removed to Portland, Oregon, where he became partner with a Mr. Broden, and under the firm name of Halsey & Broden, conducted one of the largest and most successful stationery trades in the West."

ture in Florida, where for many years he has spent half of each year. Soon after going to Pennsylvania he married Anna Sprowl, a native of Kennett, Chester County, and a member of the Society of Friends.

11811332.—Gaius Leonard Halsey, was born at Kortright, New York, May 4th, 1819. He was educated at Kortright by the village minister, William McAuley, and at Hartwick Seminary near Cooperstown. He read medicine at Franklin with Dr. Francis W. Hine, and took his degree from the Fairfield (now the Albany) Medical College. He settled at Unadilla, N. Y., in April, 1840, and married Theodora M. Kirby of Bainbridge, by whom he had two children, both dying young. His wife also died a few years after the marriage. Dr. Halsey, Sept. 18, 1845, married Juliet Carrington of Southington, Conn., and removed to Plainville, Conn., from which place, in March, 1849, he set out for California in search of gold. He went by the Panama route, sailing from New York in the second steamer sent out by the Pacific Mail Co. From the Isthmus he proceeded to San Francisco on the Steamer Panama, on board of which were several persons destined to become distinguished—David D. Porter, the future Admiral; William W. Gwin, afterwards United States Senator and better known as Duke Gwin; Jessie Benton Fremont, daughter of Thomas H. Benton and wife of General Fremont; Joseph Hooker, afterwards known as Fighting Joe Hooker, and Lieut. Derby, the humorist, called Phœnix. Dr. Halsey spent five months in the gold diggings on the middle fork of the American River and would have settled in San Francisco as a physician had not the place been already overcrowded with medical men. On returning home, he nearly lost his life from an attack of Chagres fever. From Connecticut he now went back to Unadilla which remained thenceforth his home. In the last year of his life he published in a newspaper reminiscences of his California experience. In politics Dr. Halsey was a Democrat. He had been Supervisor of Unadilla and a delegate to State Conventions. After the battle of Antietam he went to Frederic, Maryland, and served in Union hospitals. Late in life he cast his sympathies with the Labor and Greenback organizations, and on their ticket ran for State Comptroller. He was a member of the Otsego County and New York State Medical societies. Dr. Halsey died on February 17th, 1891, his wife surviving him as she does still. He was a man of tall frame—six feet and two inches—and in his best days weighed considerably more than two hundred pounds. During his funeral, on a warm, still afternoon in February, the day and the hour the same as those of the New York funeral of General W. T. Sherman, business in the village was closed. At the head of the line walked all the physicians of the village with others from neighboring towns.

He was born in Bridge Hampton, is a brother of John T. Halsey of that place, and is some 43 years of age. Between the ages of 16 and 21 he followed the sea, being in the merchant service, and going on one whaling voyage in the bark Nimrod of this port, with Capt. James Green. At the age of 21, in September, 1862, he responded to his country's call and enlisted in the 165th New York volunteers, better known as the 2d Duryea's Zouaves; served for two years and eight months, and was sent home on a furlough at that time on account of sickness contracted in the service. Mr. Halsey was not discharged from the service until after the close of the war, and was too sick for two years and four months to do any work after leaving the service. He entered the service as a private and came out as a first sergeant. While in the army Mr. Halsey saw very active service, being in fourteen engagements—among them Port Hudson, Sabine, Cross Roads, and Pleasant Hill. He went through the whole of the Red River campaign under General Emory. Since the war he has resided in Greenport most of the time, engaged in mercantile pursuits. In Greenport he has held the position of Chief of the Fire Department for two terms, and commander of the Edward Hunting Post for two terms.

Children of 1185551 Mary Picton Halsey and Cyrus Peck.

Cyrus Peck, second son of Aaron and Miranda (Pierson) Peck, was born at the homestead, south-west corner of Main street and Maple avenue, East Orange, Nov. 1, 1829. His knowledge of the elementary branches was acquired at the Eastern District school of East Orange and of the higher at the private school of Mr. Albert Pierson, Orange, of Mr. Harrington, located for a time in the old Newark Academy, site of the present Post Office, and afterwards in the Masonic, now City Hall, of Rev. Wm. R. Weeks, D.D., the popular school of Newark in its day, and of the Rev. David H. Pierson, Ph. D., at Elizabeth, New Jersey. Leaving school in 1848, he became clerk in the wholesale boot and shoe house of Jona. H. Ransom & Co., of New York City, with whom he remained six years. At the organization of the New Jersey Express Co., (merged in the "Adams,") he became its Treasurer. June 1, 1857, he entered the service of the Continental Insurance Co. of New York and has continued his connection therewith in the successive official capacities of assistant secretary 1859, secretary 1866, 2d vice-president 1885, 1st vice president 1889. Desiring greater leisure, he declined re-election January, 1892, and accepted the less onerous but responsible position of Treasurer of the company. During his long connection therewith, he has been brought into relations with the most prominent business men. His uniform courtesy and uprightness have won for him universal esteem.

Mr. Peck, in 1854, became a resident of Roseville, a suburb of Newark, which his father developed, and when it was created the 11th ward, he was elected its first representative in the Board of Education for two consecutive terms (1856-1861). He was chosen first president of the Roseville Improvement Association 1881, which has been influential in serving many public improvements. He was an incorporator, January, 1853, of the Roseville Presbyterian Church, and has served in the forty or more years past as teacher and superintendent in its Sabbath School; secretary, treasurer and president of the Board of Trustees, and now is elder and treasurer of its benevolences. He is actively interested in and identified with the work of City Church Extension, and by appointment of the Presbytery is a member and the treasurer of "The Committee of Presbyterial Church Extension, in the Presbytery of Newark. To the Bruce St. Chapel and the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of Newark, outgrowths of the Roseville Presbyterian Church, he has given substantial aid. Of his gifts to the Roseville Church, one is thus recorded:—

"The President of the Board of Trustees, having informed the joint Board in its regular December, 1885, meeting, assembled, that on Thanksgiving Day just past, Mr. Cyrus Peck, one of the Elders, conveyed to the Trustees of The Roseville Presbyterian Church two lots of land together fifty (50) feet front on Roseville Avenue, and extending to the Alley way and adjoining the property now owned by the Church Trustees; said lots being in the estimation of the Board of Trustees of the value of $2,000, as a Thanksgiving gift, and a thank offering to the Lord"; by the unanimous vote of the Board it is ordered "That the joint Board request the Trustees to spread this information on their minute book, that the Board may thus express and record its grateful appreciation of Elder Peck's valuable gift and the most generous Christian spirit which prompted it."

Located on the lots referred to is the new and commodious brick chapel of the Roseville Church.

Mr. Peck is Treasurer and a Director of the Continental Insurance Company, Vice President of the Newark Board of Trade, member of the New England Society of Orange, life member of the New Jersey Historical Society, and of the Washington Association of New Jersey, and by appointment of Hon. David A. Depue, Justice Supreme Court, N. J., 1894-5, a member of the Essex County Park Commission and its President.

Mr. Peck is the only representative of his immediate branch of the family who has remained within the precincts of the original town of Newark and has witnessed its remarkable growth and prosperity.

Joseph Henry, son of William Jackson and Susan Day Halsey, was born at Rockaway, Morris County, N. J., on March 18, 1819. His early education was received in the local schools, and at the boarding school of Calvin S. Crane, at Caldwell, N. J. His uncle, Colonel Joseph Jackson, was engaged in mining and the manufacture of iron at Rockaway, and with him his nephew received his business training. In 1842 he went to East Avon, N. Y., whither his father had removed in 1837. In 1844 Mr. Jackson returned to Rockaway, engaging in mercantile business with Freeman Wood, and later with Ephraim Lindsley until 1848. In that year he removed to Maryland, and was connected with the Mount Savage Iron Co., and in 1852 to Troy, N. Y., where he acted as agent of the Troy and Albany Iron Works, Corning, Winslow & Co. In 1858 he came to New York and became a partner in the firm of John J. Hinchman & Co. Later he returned to the iron business in which he is still engaged at 208 Franklin street. Since coming to New York his residence has been, first in Brooklyn for twenty-nine years, and then in Morristown, N. J., where his home still is.

On Oct. 24th, 1843, Mr. Jackson married Mary Bigelow, daughter of Chilion Beach of Beach Glen, near Rockaway. She died on March 5th, 1867, leaving six children: Arthur Leflore, Alice Beach, Herbert Hallett, Helen Graham, Walter Halsey and Ernest Henry, all of whom still survive. Herbert H. was married at Dunoon, Scotland, on August 23d, 1893, to Marion Agnes, daughter of Mathew B. Brown, Esq., of Glasgow, Scotland. They have one son, born on July 21st, 1894, and named Joseph Henry, after his grandfather. Helen G. was married on June 2d, 1880, to Coleman Sellers, Jr., of Philadelphia. To them have been born five children: Marjorie, Alice Jackson (who died in infancy), Cornelia Beach, Helen, and Coleman, 3d. Ernest H. was married on Nov. 2nd, 1887, to Frances Amelia, daughter of Robert S. Gould of New York. They have one son, Theodore Frelinghuysen, born on May 8th, 1890.

Mr. Jackson united with the Presbyterian Church in Rockaway early in life and has continued in that faith to the present time. He is now a member of the First Church of Morristown, N. J., a man beloved and respected by a large circle of relatives and friends. Although he has reached the age when he might lay aside the active duties of life, it cannot be said that he "has no pleasure in them," and he preserves in a rare degree the freshness of his youthful feelings, which has always characterized him, and rendered him the most companionable of men.

"A learned and just Judge, a scholar and a gentleman, passed out of the activities and courtesies of life when he died. In the earlier days of his useful career, Mr. Scudder was one of the foremost and busiest lawyers in New Jersey. Always a tireless worker, he found time to serve his State in the Senate during the trying days of the Rebellion. Recognizing his talents and his legal acumen, Governor Randolph in 1869 appointed him to the Supreme Court Bench, a place he occupied and graced from that time to the day of his death. As a lawyer and Judge of rare attainments Mr. Scudder was widely known. As a public servant his memory will linger long and pleasantly with those who value at their highest the qualities of uprightness, learning and gentleness. It was his kindly spirit, his warm sympathy and his never-flagging interest in those to whom he was attached by ties of blood or friendship, that endeared him to the many who were honored and bettered by his companionship or association. His home life was ideal. To his children he was both father and friend." —News.

A BATTLE WITH PIRATES IN CHINA.

A NEWARKER KILLED.

Intelligence has been received from China, by the Overland Mail to England, of a desperate encounter near Kulan, between boats connected with the British steamer Rattler, commanded by W. A. Fellowes, of the Royal Navy, and the U. S. steamer Powhattan, in which, after a most gallant attack upon thirty sail of heavily armed junks, ten of the largest were destroyed and upwards of 500 of the pirates were killed. Four of the crew of the Rattler were killed and seven wounded, and three of the Powhattan's crew were killed (including Jos. A. Halsey, Jr., the purser's steward, and son of Smith Halsey, Esq. of this city), and ten wounded, of whom two have since died.

It appears that the pirates had become very troublesome in those waters, and having captured two lorchas and five junks, under convoy of the British steamer Eaglet, they displayed such formidable numbers and determined bravery, that the Captain was obliged to call upon her Majesty's ship Rattler for assistance, which was readily granted. The pirates, however, retreated to such shoal water at Kulan, that the ship was unable to follow them, and her Captain, Fellowes, returned to Hong Kong to invite the co-operation of the U. S. Steam Frigate Powhattan, which was undergoing repairs there. An expedition was at once formed, with three boats and a hundred officers and men of the American frigate, under command of Lieut. Pegram, who all repaired to the Rattler, from which launches filled with officers and marines, were also sent up the bay after the pirates.

The Rattler's pinnace and Powhattan's cutter were sent out to intercept a lorcha, which was attempting to escape, and on meeting her, the China Mail says, as bold an attack was made as was ever witnessed in those waters. The pirates offered a desperate resistance, and finally blew up a junk, which produced sad havoc. The report of the death of Mr. Joseph A. Halsey is confirmed this morning by a letter to his father, written by the purser of the ship, of which the following is a copy:—

U. S. Steam Frigate Powhatan,
Hong Kong, Aug. 8, 1855.

Dear Sir—I deeply regret to inform you, that in a combined attack of the boats of this ship and the British steamer "Rattler" on a large fleet of Chinese pirates, on the 4th inst., your son, Joseph A. Halsey, who formed one of the crew of our second launch, after boarding, was blown up in one of their captured vessels, meeting an instantaneous death. The officers present at the engagement, speak in high terms of the bravery shown by him in the action, and his untimely fate is deeply regretted by all on board. So violent was the explosion that not a vestage of his remains could be found afterwards

Previous to starting on the expedition, as if anticipating his fate, he left with one of his shipmates a paper, of which the following is a copy:—

U. S. Ship Powhatan, Aug. 3, 1855.

To whom it may concern:—

I hereby request that my effects may be sold, and the proceeds, together with the pay which may be due me, I give and bequeath to my father, Smith Halsey, Newark, New Jersey.

JOSEPH A. HALSEY.

Witness, Benj. Collier.

We extract the following details of the conflict from a long account in the "China Mail":—

The boats soon neared the pirates, Lieutenants Pegram and Rolando, with the launches of the Powhatan, first, by volleys of musketry clearing the decks of the two largest, then boarding and driving the pirates overboard at the point of the bayonet. This, however, was not done without a hard struggle, for the miscreants fought with the fury of despair; but they had of course no chance with the marines and blue jackets.

The other fatal accident was the blowing up of a junk, which for a time had offered the most determined resistance to the gig, in which were Captain Fellowes and Assistant Surgeon Wilson, with five men, but which was ultimately taken possession of by Lieut. Rolando and his launch. Either a train had been laid before the crew left, or some determined fellow scoundrel fired the junk, for she blew up with a tremendous explosion and both officers and men were hurled into the water. Three of the men were killed, and several others frightfully scorched, one of whom died the same night, while another is not expected to live; but the officers miraculously escaped, though Lieut. Rolando was burned and Capt. Fellowes injured by the falling spars. The survivors were, however, all picked up by Mr. Craig, master's mate of the Powhatan, who had luckily gone into the boat the moment before the explosion took place. In this junk was an immense quantity of treasure, said to amount to $200,000, and the desperation with which her crew fought may be judged of from the fact that even after the Americans gained the deck they were encountered hand to hand. One man made himself particularly conspicuous, and notwithstanding several wounds, continued to throw stinkpots; but ultimately he ran below, and is believed to have fired the train which blew up the vessel.

The officers employed estimate the number of guns taken at 200 large and small, and the pirates at 1,000, 500 of whom were killed. The casualties are as follows:—

Her Majesty's steamer Rattler, 4 killed and 7 wounded.

List of Americans killed and wounded, U. S. Steamer Powhatan's Boats:

Killed—Joseph A. Halsey, Isaac Coe, and John Pepper.

Wounded—Lieutenants Pegram and Rolando, B. Adamson, J. Pendegrast, S. Mullard, H. Hounnell, P. Walderschmidt, J. Lewis, W. Taylor, and C. Tingwell, two of whom have since died.

He was born on his father's farm at Springfield, New Jersey, a place famous in Revolutionary history, and for which he always retained a strong affection. In 1840 he accompanied his father to Newark and assisted him in the leather business which he there established by buying out David B. Crockett, and forming the firm of Halsey & Taylor. In 1846 Mr. Taylor withdrew and George A. became a partner with his father. A good opportunity offering soon after, the son engaged in a wholesale clothing business which under his good management secured an extensive Southern trade. When the war broke out the business collapsed, and the firm of which Mr. Halsey was the head found itself heavily in debt. All its obligations, however, were subsequently honorably discharged. Thereafter he devoted himself to the leather business, which his father had established and which has been continued through forty-eight years, strong in means, conservative of spirit, and renowned for fairness of dealing and excellence of production. Its trade extends all over the United States, into Australia, England, and on the Continent of Europe.

Mr. Halsey carried into business much of the sentiment which characterized all his relations. He paid cash and borrowed scarcely ever, although the custom of the trade is otherwise. The personal relations between Mr. Halsey and his employees were always intimate and friendly, and it was curious when the great leather strike came to see how this feeling triumphed over business interests and prejudices. As competence developed to wealth, Mr. Halsey's business interests broadened, and he had large investments in many enterprises.

He was a director in the Niagara Fire Insurance Company, the People's Fire Insurance Company, the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, the United States Industrial Insurance Company, the Citizens' Gas Company, the Newark Library Associaton, chairman of the executive committee of the New Jersey Historical Society, vice-president of the New Jersey Agricultural Society, president of the Leather Manufacturers' Association, a member of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, of the Essex Republican and Essex County Country Clubs and of the Union League Club of New York. He was for many years president of the New Jersey State Insane Asylum, at Morris Plains, and was at the time of his death the only surviving member of the commission appointed to select a site and direct the building of the Asylum. He acquitted himself most creditably in all the functions that devolved upon him.

A Jerseyman born and bred, a resident of Newark of many years, his kindly face and imposing figure were known to almost every man and woman and child in his city. Mr. Halsey was a friendly man. There was that about him which not only attracted people, but which invited their confidence and commanded their respect. The kindness of his disposition beamed in his face, and there was that warmth in his hand-grasp and that tenderness in his eye which once having been experienced sealed to him as friends all those who met him. But it is as a citizen and as a friend that Newark will feel most keenly the departure of Mr. Halsey. No one was better known in every department of the social, commercial and industrial life of that city, and in each channel his influence was potent and vital. In all measures for the advancement of the city with which his long and eminently prosperous career has been identified, in every project for the advancement of the city, he was eager and alert. It was no small loss, therefore, which Newark sustained in the death of Mr. Halsey. He embodied in a large degree the qualities of a patriotic citizen, a loyal Republican, a successful business man, a true friend, and an ideal man of the home.

Perhaps his most severe business trial came when the Mechanics' National Bank failed. How sturdily he labored to save something from the wreck, for the bank's creditors, and with what great honor the bank's affairs were closed out, largely through his labors and his prompt sacrifices, few men have known; but this record of redemption is one of the proudest chapters in Newark's financial history.

Mr. Halsey was a politician in the better sense and in a manner that would redeem less worthy ambitions. As Assemblyman in 1860 and 1861, Assessor of Internal Revenue for five years, then member of Congress for two years, then defeated, then elected again (in 1871) and declining another renomination; then (1874) an unsuccessful candidate for Governor when it was defeat to be nominated, and for years a member of the Republican National Committee, some features of his political career deserve special consideration. At its beginning his adherence to the Republican party involved a certain sacrifice. His business was with the South and trouble with the South meant loss, if not disaster. Principle was greater than his business ambition, and for the genuineness of his victory over self, for what it meant to be a Republican at a time when Newark's trade lay so largely below Mason and Dixon's line, ask older men who will tell of a struggle which scarcely any other Northern community went through. Again, when he was a member of Congress and of a National Committee he early perceived the genius of James G. Blaine, and grasped the strength of that statesman's political ideas. Committing himself to the Blaine movement, Mr. Halsey was one of its great leaders, and his own political career suffered from the devotion of his friendship far more than men generally understood, owing to the complications of politics in this State. Throughout his political life, considerations of personal advancement yielded time and again to principle, to his views of party policy, and to demands of personal friendship. In helping the party of his devotion, he was liberal with his purse, with his time and with his labor. His ambition was to be United States Senator, and under a better rule it would have been realized. Other office was offered him, but place-holding was not his purpose; political honors must be genuine to have true attractiveness.

In 1873 when the Ford homestead at Morristown, which had been Gen. Washington's Headquarters in 1779-80, was advertised for sale, he attended with a view of securing it for a private residence, but as soon as he learned of the plan of Gov. Randolph, Mr. Lidgerwood and Gen. Halsted to buy the property and maintain it as a historic place, he cordially entered into their plans. He helped to make the purchase, to secure from the State a favorable charter, and from the organization of the Washington Association until the time of his death was most active in its support. Up to 1884 he was Vice President, but on the death of Gov. Randolph he became President and continued such until in 1887 he resigned in favor of Jonathan W. Roberts.

He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church in Newark, and his church associations were intimate, his religious devotions genuine and consistent.

His judgment was so sound that he was consulted about all sorts of things, financial, commercial, mechanical and political. His unfailing goodness of heart was displayed in the willingness he showed to help everybody by his counsels and to point out methods of extrication from difficulties which the people who consulted him did not see their way clear to overcome. His character was exemplary; his sense of rectitude was immovably strong; there are no words of praise that can be spoken of him which could possibly be in excess of his deserving.

On Friday morning, March 30, 1894, he had a severe chill, and on Friday evening was very weak, with symptoms of pneumonia. On Saturday he was better again, but on Saturday evening his condition changed for the worse, and on Sunday all hope was abandoned. As the evening lengthened he passed quietly away. All the members of his family were with him at the last. A kidney trouble from which he had suffered for several years, complicated with a light attack of pneumonia, was the cause of death.

His funeral was held at the First Presbyterian church, in Newark, at 2.30 P. M., April 5th, 1894, and was one of the largest and most impressive funerals ever held in Newark. The church was crowded with distinguished citizens, public officers, and representatives of business, civic and other organizations, and the street in front of the church was thronged with people. The pulpit and chancel were filled with elaborate floral designs. The interment was at Mt. Pleasant Cemetery.

Since the above was printed, a member of the family says that Mr. Halsey came to Newark in 1842, and was with the firm of Halsey & Tucker learning the tanning business until 1846. Soon after, he and Robert M. Hunter formed a copartnership under the name of Halsey & Hunter in the clothing business. In 1852 this firm bought out the Petersburg, Va., branch of the business of Nehemiah Perry, and established a house there under the name of A. S. Shafer & Co., A. S. Shafer and Silas C. Halsey joining the firm which became in Newark, Halsey, Hunter & Co.

12242592.—Silas Condit, b. Sept. 26, 1829, at Springfield, N. J.; living at Newark, N. J.

Silas Condit was b. on the old farm at Springfield, N. J., Sept. 26, 1829. The house was built from timber growing on the land and always held a warm place in Mr. Halsey's heart. He took a landscape painter to it in after years and obtained a most faithful picture with its garden, out houses and adjoining fields, extending back to the Orange mountains. Many revolutionary relics have been found on this place. In 1845 when the family came to Newark, he came also, and entered the private school of Rev. Dr. Weeks. After the death of Dr. Weeks he attended the school of Rev. Dr. Wm. Bradley, but was obliged to leave school soon after on account of his health. He had grown a foot in one year, and at eighteen years of age was six feet two and a-half inches high and only thirty inches around the waist. No one would suspect this seeing Mr. Halsey's present splendid physique, weighing 260 pounds and measuring 49 inches about the chest. In 1852 when his brother bought the Southern business of Mr. Perry, he went to Petersburg with his cousin, Daniel Halsey, to take charge of it, returning in 1853. September 13th of that year he was married to Frances Lothrop Day, daughter of Charles Thompson Day. He returned to Virginia, but only until the Spring of 1854 when he came back to Newark and remained in the firm of Halsey, Hunter & Co. until that firm was dissolved in 1866. In that year, Oct. 31, Mrs. Frances L. Halsey died. With Robert M. Hunter and Daniel Halsey he bought out the large business of John McGregor, and the firm of Halsey, Hunter & Halsey was formed which continued until 1875, when he withdrew from it. This year (1875) Nov. 3, he married Ella Louise Price, daughter of Jesse D. Price of Elizabeth.

August 22, 1862, Gov. Chas. S. Olden appointed Mr.

Halsey Aid-de-Camp to Gen. Cornelius Van Vorst, commanding the rendezvous at Camp Frelinghuysen, and on Sept. 1st he was appointed Assistant Q. M. General, with rank of Major, and as such had charge of the Q. M. Department at the Newark Rendezvous for three years. He was sent many times to the front in Virginia with supplies for the New Jersey troops, and did valuable service to the State and its soldiers.

June 1st, 1889, he was appointed by President Harrison U. S. Consul at Sonneberg at the entrance of the Theringen Wald, the second largest consulate in Germany. The port sent $12,000,000 in exports to the U. S. annually, and $15,000 went to the U. S. Treasury. Two Consular Agencies were under his charge besides his Consulate proper, one at Saxe Coburg Gotha, taking in a large part of the Duchy of Saxe Coburg, but all of Prussian Thuringia. The other was at Bamberg in Bavaria. These agencies gave him the opportunity of visiting many of the principal cities of Germany which he improved, discharging at the same time all his official duties with promptness and ability. He had three Dukes in his consulate and was entertained by the Grand Duke Ernest the 2d of Saxe Coburg Gotha, and by the Grand Duke of Saxe Meiningen, as well as by the other American ministers in Paris and Berlin. In Berlin he had the pleasure of dining with Count Herbert Bismarck and with the Duke of Edinburg. The continued illness of Mrs. Halsey compelled him to resign his office January 1, 1894.

Mr. Halsey united with the Central Presbyterian Church in 1848, and after his return from Petersburg he, with his wife, connected themselves with the South Park Presbyterian Church. After the death of his father and mother, however, Mr. Halsey united with Trinity Church in Newark. The family had been Presbyterians since the earliest memory of them and the parents would have considered it rank heresy to have their son join any other fold.

Mr. Halsey is a good business man, a genial companion, and exceedingly hospitable. Nothing gives him greater pleasure than to entertain his friends, and in a manner something out of the common. Not long since he gave a dinner to Mr. Joseph Alexander, an old friend of his father's, now over 91 years of age. A majority of the guests were over 80 years of age, and several were over ninety. He has travelled extensively both in this country and in Europe, and having the means to gratify his taste in this direction will see what is worth seeing. He is a very good representative of this worthy branch of the family.

Rev. William H. Groves, Presbyterian minister at Lynnville, Tenn., afterwards, 1895, preaching at Millboro Springs, Virginia; b. Dec. 5, 1848, at Wilmington, N. C.; m. July 8, 1875, Mary W. Wharton, of Greensboro, N. C. His mother died of yellow fever in Charleston, S. C. His father married again. He ran away after his father's death in 1861 and joined the Confederate Army. His health was extremely delicate before that. Was with Gen. Lee around Richmond, afterwards with Gen. Jackson; was captured in 1864 at the battle of Piedmont Junction; was sent to Camp Morton, Indianapolis, Ind.; escaped and made his way to Pulaski Co., Va.; was very sick; lived there four years at hard farm work, but went to school. Determined to study for the ministry, but the future seemed dark; "for one month I went every night to a grave yard and prayed God to open the way if he wished me to preach. One night after I returned from the grave-yard, I was handed a letter from friends in Wilmington, N. C., offering to educate me. This seemed to be a direct answer to prayer, for the letter came unsolicited. The offer was fulfilled, I graduated at Union Theological Seminary in April, 1874, and was ordained one year after." His first charge was Marion, Virginia, where he remained six years. His next charge was Fayetteville, Tenn., four years. Next at Lynnville, Tenn., where he remained seven years. He labored 1892–3 at Roanoke, Va. Here he had to gather his congregation. The first year was successful, but arduous. He preached three times every Sunday and walked seven miles. Was on his feet almost all the time through the week. He gathered in one congregation 130 members, in another 40. The financial crash came and many of his members moved away. He moved to Millboro Springs in 1894. "I feared coming but He has been with me." He has three children, William Wharton, Marion Halsey and Julia Halsey.

From a Geneva paper we quote the following:—

"Among the degrees most creditably conferred for many years by Hobart College is that of Doctor of Divinity, given to Rev. Lewis Halsey, at the recent Commencement. He was graduated at Hobart in 1868, and at Rochester Theological Seminary in 1872. He was ordained at Ogden, his first pastorate, in 1872; and became pastor of the Baptist church at Farmer Village, Seneca County—a large and flourishing church—in 1874. Born in Trumansburg, a few miles south of Farmer Village, he is a son of Trumansburg church. But he is a grandson of Covert, the town in which Farmer Village is situated; and was 'adopted into the family,' at Farmer Village. He remains the honored pastor of the Farmer Village church, and is in the seventeenth year of his pastorate.

"Dr. Halsey is widely appreciated for his admirable qualities as a preacher and pastor; and his scholarly tastes and acquirements have given him a deserved preeminence. He is a successful writer as well as minister of the gospel. His 'History of the Seneca Baptist Association,' of about three hundred pages, gives good evidence of his literary ability. It is not merely a recital of facts of ecclesiastical interest; but embraces some highly interesting chapters of early history of the Seneca Nation of Indians and of the pioneer settlement of this region. It is a book of permanent value."

From Tufts he was graduated in 1867 and in the following year went to Washington where he spent a winter as stenographer, doing work for Senator Oliver P. Morton and General John A. Logan. During the following winter he was an official stenographer at Harrisburg. In the next year he was Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, and in the next Transcribing Clerk in the same body. During these stenographic years, he had been reading law at Wilkes Barre with Lyman Hakes and Charles E. Rice, now President Judge of Luzerne County. In September, 1872, he was admitted to the bar and soon opened an office in Wilkes Barre, where he is still in practice. He has served many mining companies and corporations, and for a long period has been one of the attorneys of the Lehigh Valley R. R. and of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co. Children of 11811.13.14 Charles Halsey and Hannah Smith.

1.—Emily Alice, b. at Bridge Hampton, N. Y., July 3, 1846; m. June 21, 1865, Hayward A. Harvey, of Orange, N. J., inventor of the Harvey process for hardening armor plate. The following is from a sketch of him in the "Engineering and Mining Journal," Sept. 2, 1893:—

Hayward Augustus Harvey, who died at his home in Orange, N. J., August 28th, 1893, after a painful illness of several months, was one of the few examples of the distinguished son of a distinguished father. He was born in Jamestown, N. Y., January 17th, 1824, and was thus in his 70th year. His father was General Thomas W. Harvey and his mother was Matilda Hayward, both of Vermont.

General Harvey moved from Jamestown to Ramapo in 1833, and to Poughkeepsie in 1836. Here young Harvey spent his boyhood, attending the Academy; later he studied at the Academy of New Paltz, N. Y. From this school he went into his father's shop in Poughkeepsie, where he learned drafting and various branches of mechanical engineering.

The names of the Harveys, father and son, are very closely connected with the manufacture of wood screws in this country. General Harvey had carried on the manufacture of wood screws in a small way at Ramapo and Montgomery, N. Y. This was continued in Poughkeepsie, the first patents being granted to General Harvey in 1836, in which year the Poughkeepsie Screw Company was organized. Before General Harvey's inventions the operation of screw making was very crude, the blanks being put in and taken out one by one, and the cutting tool operated by hand. By General Harvey's first improvement the operation was made partially automatic. The blanks were still supplied one by one, but the operation of the cutting tools was regulated and adjusted by the machine itself.

Although the gimlet-pointed screw is generally supposed to be a comparatively modern invention, yet the first screws offered by General Harvey in the market in

New York were gimlet-pointed and were so named by him. They were, however, superseded by tapered screws, which held the market for many years. General Harvey also first introduced machines for shaving screw-heads, and the chaser tool in place of the cutting dies—previously employed.

In 1839 the Poughkeepsie company sold out to a company organized at Somerville, N. J., and screws were made first in Providence about 1840. In 1842 General Harvey began the experiments which made the screw machines entirely automatic, introducing self-feeding of blanks, etc. Patents on this machinery were taken out in 1846. In 1844 the New York Screw Company was organized, with General Harvey as president. Young Harvey was connected for a time with this company, and in 1850 he took charge of the wire department of the screw company at Somerville. In 1849 the Somerville company was reorganized, buying the machinery of Thomas W. Harvey and of a small concern at Schenectady, and taking the name of the Union Screw Company.

The patents of 1846 had been carefully studied by parties in Providence and New York, and they produced another automatic machine. From this time on the competion was severe, being entirely among home manufacturers, the foreign makers being ruled out of the market by the low prices. In 1854 the Somerville company was obliged to close on account of the competition.

Mr. Harvey was interested with his father in what was known as the Harvey Steel and Iron Company, of Mott Haven, New York; and in 1854, upon the breaking up of this company and after his father's death, he conducted for a time a steel works, chiefly experimental, at Norfolk, Conn. During the following ten years his attention was directed to developing many of his father's unfinished projects, and during these years he was at times closely connected with the American Screw Company, of Providence. In 1865 he founded the Continental Screw Company in Jersey City, which became the owner of Mr. Harvey's first patents on screw machinery, covering the entire process of wood-screw making. After a short existence these works were bought out by the American Screw Company. From 1870 to 1890 Mr. Harvey was constantly at work designing new machinery for making screws, bolts, wire nails, washers, spiral springs and many other articles of that kind. The most notable of his inventions during this period is what is known as the "rolled thread" screw. Instead of cutting the screw thread into the wire, Mr. Harvey rolled or cold-forged the thread partly into, partly upon the surface of the wire itself. He gave to these screws a sharp central point, which, with the large thread and small neck, with incidental saving in the weight of wire, necessarily gave to the Harvey rolled screw such an immense advantage over all other screws that the great screw manufacturers of the world, the American Screw Company, of Providence, and the Nettlefolds, of England, were practically obliged to purchase the Harvey patents, which they did in 1886.

Among other inventions of Mr. Harvey should be mentioned the so-called grip-bolt, which has been and is very largely used as a fish-plate bolt on many of the principal railroads of this country, doing away with nut locks. The bolt once being screwed into the nut, forms a "perfect fit," and cannot be shaken off by the jar of passing trains.

In connection with railroad track bolts an incident may be mentioned showing the fertility of Mr. Harvey's mind in mechanical matters. A prejudice existed among many engineers and master mechanics of railroads in favor of a washer or nut-lock of some kind. Mr. Harvey refused to entertain the idea of changing the principle of his grip bolt, but being pressed to devise a washer which could compete with the Verona washer, at that time very largely used, he invented the now well-known ribbed spiral washer, which has gone into very extensive use.

Of late years, however, Mr. Harvey's name has been best known as that of the inventor of the so-called "Harvey process for tempering steel." The history of the inception of this is interesting. During a time when the Harvey Screw and Bolt Company was in operation, Mr. Harvey conceived the idea of making a bolt and nut of cast iron, with threads partially impressed on them in the mold, and then hardening or "steelifying" the surfaces of the threads and of the bolts and nuts so as to give them the necessary toughness. The experiment was, however, a failure, but the product was so peculiar that it was remarked at that time, 1885, that Mr. Harvey had probably made a discovery in the metallurgy of steel. This peculiar product attracted the attention of Mr. B. G. Clarke, of the Thomas Iron Company, who for some years had been associated with Mr. Harvey in the screw patents. On Mr. Clarke's encouragement, Mr. Harvey pursued his experiments, and soon succeeded in producing from ordinary low-grade Bessemer steel a steel equal in every respect to the finest crucible or cast steel. He made out of this razor blades, knife blades, files, etc. The first patents on this new product and process were granted to Mr. Harvey in 1888. Works were established at Jersey City, afterward moved to Newark. Out of these experiments grew the Harvey armor plate process and product, which have made a revolution in the armoring of vessels.

The naval authorities of the United States Government were not slow in perceiving the superiority of the Harvey plate over any other form. The tests made by the United States Government have resulted in the Harvey Armor plate process being adopted for the new navy. The governments of Great Britain, France, Spain, Russia, Denmark and Japan have all tested and ordered armor made by this process, and a plant for treating armor plate by this process has been erected by every manufacturing firm in the world who are engaged in making steel armor.

Mr. Harvey lived long enough to see the fruits of his labors and to participate in the profits. He was emphatically a progressive man. When his mind was engaged in inventions it was difficult for him to stop; he always saw so much beyond. His processes of thought were entirely original. In making his inventions he usually declined to be guided by the experience of others. The fact that some one had done a certain thing in a certain way almost always made him reject that way, and look for a path of his own. He was a singularly persuasive man, as he must needs be to get the attention and the confidence and support of prominent capitalists, in which he was very successful. Although always a positive man, yet it is doubtful whether he left any enemies behind him, on account of his sympathetic and really lovable nature, which made warm friends for him among all classes of men.

He was twice married; first in 1850 to Miss Matilda Winant, of New York, who died in 1856, leaving one son, Dr. Thomas W. Harvey, of Orange. In 1865 he married Miss Emily A. Halsey, of Bridgehampton, Long Island; and their son is Hayward A. Harvey, Jr., in charge of the Harvey Steel Company's works at Newark.

Mr. Harvey was one of the founders of the New England Society of Orange, was a Blue Lodge Mason, and had taken all the degrees of Odd Fellowship.

1.—Moses F. Cory, b. July 21, 1827; m. Dec. 22, 1847, Susan R. Enders; d. at Elizabeth, Jan. 24, 1895.

Moses F. Cory was born in 1827 in Westfield, this county, in which town his father, Benjamin Cory, was also born. In fact the family was one of the oldest in the history of the town, as well as one of the most highly respected.

His education was obtained in the schools of his native village, and when he became of age sufficient to enter business he became connected with a furniture manufacturer in Rahway, where for a number of years he remained. Afterward he became associated with John Price, who for many years conducted a cabinet shop in a building long since razed, which stood at the southwest corner of Elizabeth avenue and Spring street. When he left that business Mr. Cory for some time was engaged in the house-painting business.

A number of years ago he succeeded J. Harvey Cory as Secretary of the National Fire and Marine Insurance Company, which position he held until a year ago, when, upon the death of Jacob Davis, he was elected Vice President of the company, a position occupied by him until his death.

In politics Mr. Cory had been a staunch Republican since the late war. His family were of the old stock Democracy, but after the war the deceased joined the ranks of the Republicans, with whom he identified himself through the remainder of his life. Two terms, those of 1876 and 1877, he represented his district in the House of Assembly.

Mr. Cory was a man of sterling qualities, of high honor, thoroughly conscientious. He was a true citizen, and highly respected by all who knew him. Being a Presbyterian, he was for many years a member of the Westminster Church. A few weeks ago, owing to his enfeebled health and a desire to worship nearer home, he severed his connection with Westminster and joined the Second Presbyterian Church.

Among his other relations are William Cory of Westfield and E. N. Marsh of this city, who are but two of a large circle of cousins who reside in this vicinity.—["Elizabeth Journal," Jan. 25, 1895.]

Having received a common school education he became a clerk in the store of his brother, ex-Alderman William Wade, in N. Y. City. Subsequently he became agent of the Haxhall line of Schooners plying between New York and Richmond, Virginia, and while a partner in the firm joined the 71st Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y. His fondness for military life caused his rapid promotion and as First Lieutenant he left New York, in command of his company, in response to President Lincoln's call for volunteers on that memorable Sunday in April, 1861.

He was with his Regiment at the first battle of Bull Run and returned with them to New York in July at the close of their three months' service. The following February he enlisted and was commissioned as Captain by Governor Morgan and was assigned to the 59th Regiment New York Volunteers, then stationed in the defences at Washington.

The Regiment was engaged in the seven days battles on the Peninsula, in the battle of South Mountain and of Antietam, in which last engagement Captain Wade fell at the head of his company wounded through the back of the neck by the rifle ball of a sharp-shooter. He was 36 hours within the lines of the enemy and after their retreat he was taken by his comrades to the Hospital at Keedysville. His brother attempted to remove him to his home in New York, but he died at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania on October 5th, 1862, and was buried on October 9th in his native village where a military monument has been erected to his memory. G. A. Post, No. 520, was named after him.

In his researches among the British Archives for information regarding the founders of America, Mr. Samuel G. Drake discovered the following: "6 May 1635 Theis under written names are to be transported to New England imbarqued in the Elizabeth and Ann, Roger Coop Mr, the p'ties have brought cert. from the Ministers where their abodes were and from the justices of the Peace of their conformity to the Orders and discipline of the Church of England and yt. they are no subsidy men. they have taken the oath of allegiance and supremacie.

In the Memorial History of Boston, Vol. 1, 228, George Halsoll, in Jan., 1646-7, was ordered to keep and employ a passage boat between his wharf and where the ships ride. In 1645 he bought a wharf of Samuel Cole. Cornet Wm. Halsey was in 1674 appointed Cornet in the "3 counties troop."

Several other children died in infancy.

None of the above left any children of their own, but William adopted Augusta and Hamilton Rogers, who were not related to him; and Charles adopted James and John Rogers, probably brothers of Augusta and Hamilton. These adopted children took the name Halsey and left descendants who are named in the Whitney Genealogy, Vol. I, page 567.

The three brothers, John, William and Charles, came to Brooklyn between 1835 and 1840 and lived all the remainder of their lives on Clinton avenue. John was a member of the firm of Haight, Halsey & Co., importers of hat trimmings, &c., on Broadway. He was identified with all the early enterprises of the city of Brooklyn, and for many years Senior Warden of the Church of the Messiah. At the time of his death he was Director in the Mechanics' Bank, Mechanics' Ins. Co., Brooklyn Trust Co., Brooklyn Safe Deposit Co., Atlantic R. R. Co., Nassau Ins. Co., Dime Savings Bank, Home Life Ins. Co.; People's Gas Light Co. and Amity Ins Co. He was a man of scrupulous honesty, liberal in thought and generous in disposition.

William and Charles Halsey composed the firm of William Halsey & Co., which carried on an East India goods business for nearly fifty years at the corner of Water street and Burling slip. They lived private lives and were successful merchants of the old East Indian stripe.

1.—William H. Hulsey, b. Oct. 1, 1839; lawyer; living at Atlanta, Ga., 1886; at age of 28 Mayor of Atlanta, member of Assembly; m. Marion Bateman.

The following extract is from the "Atlanta Constiuttion," Oct. 16, 1892:—

Colonel Hulsey is a native Georgian, and when the war broke out, he recorded his name among those who went to the front to fight for the cause of the South. The colonel's first experience as a soldier was a private in the sixth Georgia. In that regiment he fought vigorously and bravely for two years. With an ugly wound disabling him he was given as a Christmas present his furlough, and upon that furlough he came to his home in Monroe county. While there he was transferred to the forty-second Georgia, and by unanimous consent was elected lieutenant of one of the companies.

From a lieutenancy Colonel Hulsey was promoted to a captaincy and at the head of a company he served with such ability that the epaulettes of a major were soon tendered him. Hulsey was born to command, and in his new position, this fact so much impressed his superiors that the first vacancy above him was given him and as a lieutenant-colonel he made his mark. Just before the war closed the commission of colonel was tendered him and before the paper bearing the signature of President Davis reached the Georgia boy his face was yet beardless. The war ended and Colonel Hulsey never received that letter that was coming. Immediately after the war Colonel Hulsey began the practice of law with the late lamented Judge Ezzard and rapidly rose to distinction. It was Colonel Hulsey who was removed from the office of solicitor general by Governor Bullock, and that removal gave Hulsey more friends than the continuance in office would have done. He was Atlanta's mayor once, and when he took the oath of office, he was the youngest man who had ever qualified for the position of chief executive of the city. As mayor he was as successful as he was in the military and the law. After retiring from the mayor's chair, he devoted his time and attention to the practice of his profession, and no man in Georgia has made a more enviable reputation in every branch of the law than Colonel Hulsey. He is a deep thinker, a careful student and fluent talker.

William Baker Halsey, b. at Rome, N. Y., March 20, 1816; d. March 3, 1887, at Wadena, Illinois; m. 1st, Roxana Wright, June 5, 1842; she d. September, 1873; he m. 2d, Mrs. Susan Hammond. His mother's name was Emily or Emma Tryon, a descendant of Gov. Tryon; was described as the finest looking woman of her day and as noble and good as she was handsome. He was a preacher of the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

His children were:—

1.—Sabin, b. Dec. 22, 1843, at Irwin, N. Y.; minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church; Presiding Elder of Milwaukee District in 1887; living at Fond du Lac., Wis.; m. June 14, 1871, Ella M. Ward.

Dr. Halsey has one daughter, Ethel, b. at Kenosho, Wisconsin, July 23, 1878.

From an article in the "Milwaukee Sentinel" of August 26, 1894, we quote :—

"Dr. Halsey first came to Milwaukee in 1882, when he served with the Grand Ave. M. E. Church for one term of three years. At the expiration of that period he was transferred to the Fond du Lac district, over which he officiated until 1887, or for two years, as the Presiding Elder. He was then assigned to the Milwaukee district as Presiding Elder, and until 1889 he officiated in that capacity, when he was given again to the people of the Grand Avenue church. He has now served a second term, or five years, in this pastorate, and it may be said that cases are very rare in the Methodist church in which a pastorate extends over as long a period as that.

"During Dr. Halsey's second pastorate the church has been entirely rebuilt, and the seating capacity increased one third, while the membership in the church has nearly doubled. It embraces now between 500 and 600 members, and it is pronounced the largest Protesant congregation in the city. That Dr. Halsey was held in high esteem both during his pastorates and while he was with the districts, is shown by the fact that in 1884, two years after he first became connected with the Grand Avenue church, when he was but 38 years old, he was elected to the general conference, as he also was in 1888, when he presided over the Milwaukee district. During both those sessions of the general conference Dr. Halsey acted as assistant secretary.

"Dr. Halsey is also widely known as a powerful and original pulpit orator, but it is not alone his unique sermons and active work among his flock that bring him prominently before the public. His name during the last five years has been coupled with a larger number of wedding ceremonies than that of any other Milwaukee minister, which has served not only to make his name well-known, but affords evidence of the sentiments with which he is regarded by people both within and without his congregation. Probably not less than 1,200 to 1,500, and certainly no lower than 1,000 couples, have been united here by Dr. Halsey, and it is a record that no other Milwaukee preacher can parallel.

"The Reverend Doctor's hearty manner and kind interest with all with whom he comes in contact never fails to win a friend, and his reputation for cordiality has thus become as widespread as his name. Besides, the fact that Dr. Halsey is always to be found at home, also has much to do with the work he has accomplished among the people. He has not enjoyed a week's vacation during the twenty-four years he has been in the pulpit. An occasional drive with his carriage horse about the suburban roads he considers recreation enough for him."

NOTE S.

Halsey—Haxey—Hassey—Hasey.

The following is the record of a family whose name was originally Halsey, but it has passed through successive changes until it has reached its present form—Hasey. The ancestor does not appear to have been a descendant of Thomas Halsey. Having married a French lady whose surname was Louis, he came directly to this country from England soon after the Revolutionary war. He was a sea captain owning his own ship and its cargo, and with his family resided at Chelsea, Mass. Meeting with losses at sea, he bought land of the State of Massachusetts where the city of Bangor, Me., now stands, and removed there. This he exchanged for better land located four miles further East, and now within the limits of "East Bangor." This same property his descendants up to three years ago have continued to own and occupy. This emigrant ancestor came to this country when his son, William Hasey, was between twelve and fifteen years old. As the son died about 1853, aged 89 years, the date of his coming would seem to be before the Revolutionary war closed, though the grandchildren think not. Two servants came with Mrs. Halsey from France who served her as they would a queen all their lives, and are buried on the family farm at Bangor. There is a tradition that there was land in the heart of London which the family would inherit, but which was involved in debt when they came to America. They were extravagant and generous to a fault which was the cause of their impoverishment. William Hasey described to his descendants the family arms, but their recollection is not distinct. One, Mrs. Emma Crosby, describes the Webster arms which had two lions in one quarter and a boar's head in another, and was surmounted by a unicorn, and says her grandfather claimed the Halsey arms to be similar.

William Hasey had a brother, John Halsey, living in Liverpool, and another brother whose name is forgotten. All trace of these brothers and their descendants has been lost.

William Hasey married Prudence Webster, a relative of Daniel Webster, and had ten children:

1.—Martha Hasey, who m. Elisha Gibbs. She has two children still living, one the widow of Rev. Daniel B. Chaplain of Bangor, Me., and Wingate E. Gibbs of Glenborn, Me.

2.—Eben Hasey, who m. Miss Fannie Winslow of the family of Gov. Winslow. There are believed to be no children living.

3.—William Hasey, m. Miss Julia Houlton of Houlton, Me. A daughter, Mrs. Alward Fogg, lives at Houlton, Me. A son, Charles Hasey, Adjutant 7th Me. Vols., was killed at Spottsylvania Court House.

4.—Jane Hasey, d. young and unmarried.

5.—Margaret Hasey, m. Samuel Adams; a son, James W. Adams, lives at Portland, Me.
6.—Susan Hasey, m. John P. Davis.
7.—Rebecca Hasey, m. Thomas N. Mansfield.
8.—Andrew Hasey, m. Miss Nancy Johnson, of Salem, Mass. Two sons are living, Andrew G. Hasey of Bangor, Me., and Samuel L. Hasey of the Hotel Devonshire, cor. 42d street and Madison Ave., N. Y. City.
9.—Hannah Hasey, m. Richard Webster.
10.—Elijah Webster Hasey, b. 1810 at Bangor, Me.; m. 1831, Miss Hannah Martyn of Newport, Me.

Children of Elijah Webster Hasey and Miss Hannah Martyn.

1.—Thomas B. Hasey, d. 1874.
2.—Francis Hasey, b. about 1837; d. about 1858.
3.—W. H. Harrison Hasey, b. 1840; d. 1864; an officer in the war.
4.—Hannah Hasey, b. 1842; d. about 1860.
5.—Prudence, b. 1843; m. Arthur A. Pond of Minneapolis, Minn.
6.—Nancy, b. about 1846; d. 1872.
7.—Ambrosene Hasey, b. 1848; m. Geo. E. Follett of Haverhill, Mass.
8.—Elijah Hasey, b. 1850, of Minneapolis.
9.—Emma J. Hasey, b. 1852; m. George H. Crosby of Minneapolis.
10.—Charles W. Hasey, b. 1855; m. Aug. 7, 1884, Hattie Jamison, dau. of A. P. Jamison, of Waseca, Minn., of "The Pond & Hasey Co.," 251 2d Ave., S. Minneapolis.
11.—Ward B. Hasey, b. 1858, of Haverhill, Mass.
12.—Anne Hasey, b. about 1859; d. 1864.

NOTE T.

Mr. John Du Fais, architect, of 337 Fourth Avenue, N. Y., states that Josiah Pierson (1695-1737), the 7th child of Henry Pierson (b. 1652, d. 1701), and Susannah Howell, had a son Benjamin Pierson, who lived at Richmond, Mass., also in New York City, and d. at Ballston, N. Y. He married Sarah Gilbert and had a son, Jeremiah Halsey Pierson, b. 1766. This Jeremiah Halsey Pierson had a son of the same name, who also had a son of the same name, uncle of Mr. Du Fais. It would seem probable that the mother of Benjamin Pierson and one of the four wives of Josiah Pierson, was a Halsey and daughter of 118 Jeremiah.

That there was relationship between this family of Piersons and the Halseys is made more probable from the fact that at Richmond, Mass., is a grave stone with this inscription: "In memory of Mrs. Sarah Halsey, consort of Dr. Isaac Halsey, who died Dec. 1, 1824, in the 93d year of her age." This stone is on the same line with those of John Pierson (son of Benjamin Pierson, son of Josiah), and of Jabez Colt, father of Sarah Colt, wife of Jeremiah Halsey Pierson, and is near the other Pierson graves.

NOTE U.

Near Millerton, N. Y., resided a William A. Halsey, who died Oct. 9, 1863, aged 41. His father, Silas Halsey, died when he was only 10 months' old, and he knew nothing of him except his name. He was adopted and brought up by Mrs. Sarah Scronton, a lady who lived at Lagrange, Dutchess Co., N. Y. He married Samantha Reynolds and settled upon a farm about four miles from Millerton, on the road to Boston Corners. He had three children:—

1.—Sarah Elizabeth Halsey, b. Nov. 3, 1845; m. Silas Wilkinson and has one son, William Halsey Wilkinson. They reside at Millerton.

2.—Loda Halsey, b. 6th Jan., 1855; m. William Angevine and resides at Millerton.

3.—James Reynolds Halsey, b. April 24, 1857; d. 30th July, 1894; he m. Belle Merrifield, who d. 1885 leaving no children.

NOTE V.

(THE IRISH FAMILY.)

The Halseys did not all come from England. Three-quarters of a mile from Kenmore, County Kerry, Ireland, Jerry Halsey and Nora McCarthy his wife, reared a family of four sons and one daughter. From a grand-daughter, Minnie Halsey, Forest P. O., Ontario, we have this account of them, written in March, 1887:—

"Only three of the family are living. Catharine Lane, died fifteen years ago the 16th of this month (March) leaving five sons, namely, John, Thomas, Michael, Tim and James. Uncle's name was Michael Lane, and died ten years ago the 25th of last October. Uncle Patrick died three years ago the 18th of this month, leaving three sons, Michael, Dennis and Thomas; they were the eldest of the family. Uncle John, the next, is still on the old homestead, where they were all born and brought up, three-quarters of a mile from Kenmore, County Kerry, Ireland. Uncle Tim is living in Kansas, near Gerard P. O.; he has nine in family but I cannot give all of their names as it has been more than twenty years since they went off there; he is a farmer and pretty well to do. My father is the youngest, his name is Michael, and has the position of Section Foreman here for the last sixteen years. There are three of us in the family, namely, Minnie, Nora and Ella and our mother, and six dead, Catharine, Maggie, John, Willie, Michael and Frank. Michael was the last of our boys; he received a kick from a boy named Norman McFarish at school and died from the effect; he was twelve years and seven months old, and was considered the best scholar in school. He expected to graduate from the High school in November, and he died the 20th of October. Sister Nora is married, in Detroit; her husband's name is Harry Coldwell; a carpenter; they have two children, Frank and Willie. The youngest of the Lane boys is in New York in the B. and O. Tel. Co., 61 Broadway. I cannot give you the correct date of the death of our grandparents as it is years ago, but they are recorded in the Books of the Roman Catholic Church at Kenmore."

NOTE W.

The record below was received too late for insertion on page 184.

Children of 1185553 James Oakley Halsey and Katherine, daughter of John D. Norris, of Elizabeth, N. J.

1.—Fannie Josephine Halsey, born July 22, 1853; married George Hopkins Golden, Oct. 5, 1876. Her children are Percy Norris Golden, born Jan. 21, 1879, and Donald Forest Golden, born May 21, 1893.

2.—Herbert Oakley Halsey, born March 10, 1855; married Mary Emma Magie, Dec. 5, 1877. His children are Helen Louise Halsey, born Sept. 17, 1878; Frederick Magie Halsey, born Jan. 13, 1883.

1185556.—Augustus Ogden Halsey, second son of John Taylor Halsey, born in 1836, was one of the Reverend David H. Pierson's first pupils. At the age of fifteen he entered the old house of Cochran & Company, New York City, as clerk. He remained in its employ until the Rebellion broke out, when he was appointed clerk to Paymaster Eldridge at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. He was in the service of the government until the close of the war, when he obtained employment in the banking house of John Thompson, Wall street and Broadway. A few years later he entered the service of the Third National Bank, N. Y., by which institution he is still (1895) employed.

He is the oldest honorary member of the Veteran Association, Eighth Regiment New Jersey Volunteers, "Hooker's Old Guard." From the breaking out of the war until about ten years ago he was a contributor to several newspapers. He has also written short sketches and serials for magazines. On moving to Newark he was engaged upon the Newark "Sunday Call." He then made humorous writing a specialty. The Managing Editor of the Newark "Daily Advertiser," Mr. John J. Reilly, who was editor of the "Newark Call," says of Mr. Halsey's newspaper work: "As Editor of the 'Newark Call' for thirteen years, I received and edited for the press his weekly sketches, and am qualified therefore to speak of their merits. They were distinguished by an originality of conception, a humor and satire, and a general interest that gave to them every charm for the reader. And charm they did, for during a period of years

'Barnes Magoffin's' sketches were a feature of the Call and contributed not a little to its success as a newspaper."

A. O. Halsey married Maria Lukas Whittemore of Fredericksburg, Va. Their children are Grace Virginia, Margaret Oakley, 1895, married Randolph Weir; Virginia Whittemore, John Whittemore, William Forest.

His son William Halsey spent a whole winter trying to find the land and place where he died, but was unsuccessful. In 1878 a lawyer in settling an estate came upon deeds and papers in his name and ferreted out the land and the manner in which he had been defrauded of it.

Daubigne. in his History of the Reformation in England, speaks of Erasmus' visit to Oxford, and says: "He there met also most of the classical scholars of England, especially Grocyn, Linacre, Thomas Wolsey, bursar of Magdalene College, Halsey and some others. 'I cannot tell you how I am delighted with your England,' he wrote to Lord Montjoy from Oxford; 'with such men I could willingly live in the farthest coasts of Scythia.'" Eras. Epis. 1, p. 311.

NOTE AA.

No researches have yet been able to connect the Hertfordshire family of Halsey with the Halseys of Cornwall. As stated in the Introduction, it is possible that during the social and domestic disorder caused by the Wars of the Roses, some one from Cornwall migrated to Hertfordshire and thus founded the Hertfordshire line. But this is mere conjecture. What is certain is that the very earliest date connected with the name finds the name in Cornwall, and that its earliest records in Hertfordshire are just subsequent to the Wars of the Roses or more than two centuries later than the first Cornwall date. Beyond this meagre circumstantial evidence we have nothing to aid us in finding a connecting link.

Sketches of two of the Halseys of Cornwall are printed in Volume XXIV of "The Dictionary of National Biography," edited by Leslie Stephen and Sidney Lee. Concerning William Hals, or Halsey, the historian of Cornwall, mentioned on page 3 of the Introduction, the following facts are given:—

"He was the second son of James Hals of Fentongollan, and Anne, daughter of John Martin of Hurston, Devonshire.

When living at Fentongollan in St. Michael, Penkivel, Hals began about 1685 to make collections for a Parochial History of Cornwall, which he continued for half a century, bringing it down to 1736. He died in 1737 or 1739 at Tregury, St. Wenn, of which he owned the rectorial tithes, having nearly completed the work. About 1750 Andrew Brice of Exeter, published in ten-folio numbers Hals 'Complete History of Cornwall, Part II being the Parochial History,' containing accounts of seventy-two parishes, Advent to Helston. The first part was never published. Hence there is no general title-page. It is believed that the scurrilous details inserted by Hals caused a discontinuance of the publication. Hals's incomplete 'history' is very rare. The most complete copy is in the Grenville Library at the British Museum. A note in that copy states that at Lysons's sale in 1828 his copy with manuscript additions was sold to the Earl of Aylesbury for £108. The manuscripts of Hals's 'History' were acquired in 1875 for the British Museum. The British Museum possesses other manuscripts by Hals, viz: (1) 'The History of St. Michael's Mount'; (2) An Latimer ay Kernow, a Dictionary of the Cornish Language'; (3) An amended transcript of Keigwin's 'Mount Cavalry', 1679-1680."

The other Halsey of Cornwall noticed in the Dictionary is Sir Nicholas Halse, or Halsey, of Fentongollan, the captain, or governor of Pendennis Castle, of whom mention is made on page 4 of the Introduction. Sir Nicholas acquired distinction as an inventor. R. E. Anderson, the contributor of the sketch, gives the following facts in regard to Sir Nicholas's invention and his relation to James I and Charles I:—

"Halse was the inventor of a new mode of drying malt and hops by means of iron plates without the annoyance of smoke, and James I, in acknowledgement of his public benefit, granted him the benefit of all salt marshes won from the sea in Ireland. His name occurs many times as a petitioner to Charles I in 1634, 1635 and 1636 in connection with his invention, and also in connection with some proposals of his whereby his majesty might gain money to replenish the treasury and supplement the tax of ship-money which was then being levied. He prays King Charles to employ the first seven years' profit of 'the writer's invention of kilns for sweet-drying malt without touch of smoke.' He suggests further that Charles should undertake to govern the Low Countries on behalf of the King of Spain, on consideration of an annual payment of £2,000,000 by the latter, especially as the 'Hollanders' had already become ungrateful and insolent to the English, and if not checked might soon keep the Newcastle coals from coming to London and entirely deprive this country of the supply of cables, cordage, and other such matters. In another petition Halse estimates that his invention would save London alone £40,000 yearly in wood and fuel, or £400,000 for all England and Ireland.

"In the following year accordingly, an order dated Hampton Court, 11 June, directs that 'malt kilns erected by Halse be confirmed, and those by Page (his principal rival) be suppressed'; and 17 June, 1637, 'the assigns of Sir Nicholas Halse, deceased, petitioned the King to take order for vacating all patents in prejudice to the grant given to Sir N. Halse for the sole use of his new invented kilns.' During the same year a commission was appointed, dated 2 June, 'to enquire whether Nicholas Page, clerk, or Sir Nicholas Halse was the first inventor of certain kilns for the drying of malt'; and subsequent notices in the 'State Papers Collection' seem to establish the claims of the assigns of Halse.

"The most interesting relic of Halse is a small manuscript volume, in the 'Egerton Collection,' entitled 'Great Britain's Treasure, unto the sacred majesty of the great and mighty monarch Charles the first of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, King, most humbly presenteth Francis Stewart—by whose loyal care the subsequent treatises have been painefully recollected out of the old papers and fragments of that worthy and lately deceased knight, & your Majesty's faithful and ingenuous servant, Sir Nicholas Halse, Anno Domini, 1636.' The treatises, five in number, are written in a beautiful Old English character, and inscribed outside, 'Tibi Soli O Rex Charissime.' The contents refer mainly to various revenues, giving Halse's estimate of the amount realized, and certain improvements that could be effected on behalf of the crown. King Charles is advised to increase his income 'by ordering after the example of the King of France, that all foraigne shipps shall pay 15s. for eache tun on landing.' Another proposal is to grant 'a Lease of 21 years of your Majesty's fishing unto the Hollanders.' One treatise suggests the 'coynage of Mundick and Sinder Tinne' instead of the copper then current; but perhaps the most ingenious proposal for improving matters was the conversion 'of 100,000 sturdie vagabonds and idle beggars' into 'laborious and industrious tradesmen of the fishing craft.' The book consists of 114 pages, followed by about forty unpaged, which contain an 'Epilogue,' several statistical notes and a Medulla or abstract of the topics discussed."
